EDITOR TIM BOONE

Another wild and wacky month for CVG's best-dressed Editor. What with moving house, adapting his Megadreft to play Far Eastern bits and pieces and getting the all-time low score on the office Sitar Central, Tim's been a busy man. Luckily he remembered this issue, eh?

DEPUTY EDITOR PAUL GLANCEY

Girly jokes are all the rage for our illustrious Dep Ed, strutting in 'em hot Mean Machines, singing 'em some French organ and, of course, CVG! How does he do it? Actually, I think the man Glancey is a set of identical triplets, and none of them are letting on...

ART EDITOR JON BILLINGTON

It's finally happened: Jon's moved out of his dark corner and into the limelight to share his jolly jokes with all and sundry. He's also bought himself a Gameboy, managed to put the batteries in the right way round and even brush his hair without losing his temper. There's definitely something wrong.

Jetting off to far-flung places like Chicago, Florida, Disneyworld and Mr Jetty's Fun Emporium, Southern On Sea, Mean Machines' main man arrived back at the office full of news, views and all sorts of exotic title tattle - crammed the lot into CVG. Hurrah!

ANOTHER THRILLING INSTALMENT OF ED-FIRST

WANTED: ANOTHER CVG HERO REWARD: DEFINITELY

Have you got what it takes to help produce the best all-formats games mag in the known universe? Can you write and edit to our standards while setting a new high score on the Gameboy and making four cups of coffee - all at the same time?

Yes? Then why aren't you Deputy Editor for CVG? We're looking for a top man for the Number Two slot on Britain's brightest games monthly - and only the best will do. Ideally you'll have been working for another magazine (preferably a computer mag) and have a deep longing for something better.

So what are you waiting for? Get on the phone and talk to me pronto. No beginners please: producing everyone's favourite mag can be a busy old game!

"WHERE'S THAT COPY?!" ▶
It's tough being a journalist.

HELLO! Are we punch drunk or what? Not only does CVG go thumping loopy this month with another Meg Exclusive - Pitfighter II from Domark - but we've got two (count 'em) pull-out posters to boot!

First off you'll find our fantastic Pitfighter pull-out poster preview at the centre pages. Pull that out and there's Sonic The Hedgehog bursting out of the page and ready to jump onto your bedroom wall!

So how many extra pence do these power-packed poster pages set you back? None. How much extra do they cost? Nothing. Zero. Not a jot. Not even the slightest squirt.

And if that's not enough, chack out all the great giveaway comps this issue. What with a Video Walkman on offer from US Gold, a Femicom from Console Concepts and all sorts of baseball brilliance from Domark - not to mention all those brilliant Hotline giveaways - we're amazed we've got so much space left to show off all the great games!

On that score we've got a four-page review lowdown on Sonic the Hedgehog, four (count 'em) reviews of brand new Lynx games, we do the bueiness with three pages on R-Type II and Zero Wing, together with Previews of Outrun Europa and Utopia to name just a few. Phew!

Flicking through the mag you'll probably notice a few tweaks here and there. Yob's mailbag takes on a new look, and goes all international this month - and it's a third bigger! Well, what can you do when Britain's most 'orrible ol' threatens you with a week-old sashay? The less said about that the better, so until next month...

Byeee.

NEWS

SPECIAL REPORT

The Summer CES Show In Chicago has always been a launch pad for tons of new games which are shown publicly for the first time. And this year was no exception, with over 350 games on display! Julian Rignall jetted off to the "Windy City", stuffed himself with 64-oz steaks and "lemon shots" and got the low-down...

Nintendo have dominated every CES Show in recent history which isn't surprising when you consider that they and their third-party games producers take an 85% share of the American video games market. This year their presence was as substantial as ever, but Sega and NEC also had very large stands. Indicating that not everything is going Nintendo's way at the moment. Sega are on a high after recently selling their millionth Megadrive and NEC are celebrating a sales boost for their TurboGraphix 16 (the American PC Engine) after cutting its price to $99.99 (£59).

All these firms had a huge amount of product on display. Nintendo used the show to launch the Super Famicom, or Super NES as it'll be called (it has already been dubbed the SNES - pronounce 'It' 'Sneez' - by UK and US journalists). Sega displayed a range of spectacular software for the Megadrive and NEC had a whole load of new CD-ROM games on display and also revealed their upgraded CD-ROM System Card which has 2 Megabytes of storage space.

What about computer software? Well, Amigas and STs are pretty much dead in the US, and what few games there were have already been seen in Europe. The PC Compatible market is looking healthier, with plenty of "adult-oriented" games like Ultima VII, Wing Commander II, Leisure Suit Larry V and Police Quest III but few arcade-style games to get enthusiastic about, other than the Ninja Turtle Arcade Game and The Simpsons.

Could this be an indication of what will happen to the UK computer games market? We'll just have to wait and see.

MEGADRIVE MANIA

Sega's huge, walled-in stand contained rows and rows of monitors displaying a wealth of new Megadrive titles. In the centre, Sega's own games were on display, and these included Tee Jam and Earl, a very wacky one or two-player arcade game which I reckon will take the Megadrive by storm, 658 Attack Sub, Decapattack (starring Chuck D Head), a guy who can kick his head off and throw it at his enemies), Donald Duck, Joe Montana II (it's not as good as John Madden's), Mars, Phantasy Star III (more role-playing malarkey), Flicky (a conversion of an oldie-but-goldie comp-op), Shining in the Darkness, Streets of Rage (Sega's answer to Final Fight, and very good it is too), Fantasia (the sequel to Mickey Mouse, and I reckon it's even better), Alien Storm (brilliant) and Golden Axe II (golden were not quite as good).

WE'RE HAVING A THIRD PARTY.

Megadive third party stuff was in abundance. Berlin Wall (Kensko) looked neat and Turbo Outrun (IDG) a conversion of the excellent racing coin-op is excellent. Ballistic have four new titles - Test Drive, Mike Ditka Power Football, Onealught and Turrican, and Dreamworks have Jesse 'The Body' Ventura Wrestling Superstars and Trampolino Tastic.

NOT A GOOD GAMING ANGLE

Call me old fashioned, but I found the two fishing games from Hot B., Black Bass and Blue Marlin, about as exciting as watching paint dry but their shoot 'em up Over Horizon was a lot more fun.

Another five games that didn't provide much in the way ofayout fun and frolics were Remstar's Twin Eagle, Magic Darts, World Charger, Mr Chin's Gourmet Paradise and Thunder and

MEGA COIN-OP DELIGHTS

The two big coin-op firms, Capcom and Konami showed off a veritable gilt-edged collection of gaming goodies. Capcom's Little Mermaid, Little Nemo Dream Master, Tatsapin and Chip 'n' Dale Rescue Rangers are all graphically stunning - and play well too - but better still is Megaman 4 which stars new badbies and some old favourites! Their conversion of Snow Brothers is also looking very good, as is an original and rather wacky game called Yo Noid!

All the booth over the way, Konami's big game was Taanaga Mutant Ninja Turtles III, while Contra Force looks a pretty good bet for action fans. Whara In Time is German Sandiego and King's Quest V are both very good adventures, and Monstar In My Pocket, Tiny Toon Adventures, Bucky O'Hare and Laser Invasion all have promise.

AND THE REST

Snow White and Clashball (Speedball II you and I were seen at the Sofel stand and Bo Jackson Basabell, Dream Team 3-on-3 Challenge and The Avengers were Data East's showpieces.

At the Hudson hang-out catching the limeight were Jackie Chan Kung-Fu (superb stuff), Adventure Island I and II and Princesa Tomato In the Saled Kingdom (my vote for The Best Named Game Of The Show) while AGCI had Welly Bear, Shockwave, Dash Race and Chile!

THQ's line-up was impressive with Peter Pan and the Pirates, Wayne Gretzky Hockey, Videomotion (a battery backed drawing and animation program which is a first for the console scene), Whara's Waldo, Attack of the Killer Tomatoes (hee, hee), Home Alone (based on the poopy film, but what I want to know is where's the game in that?), The Flash and Swamp Thing.

A nice set of games were in evidence at Asemik. Evertland Land Top Players Tennis, Conquest of the Crystal Palace, Wurm and Boomer II were all very good and Hal America's Lolo III, Daydreamin' Davay and Kabuki Quantum Fighter were all pretty neat.

Zombia Nation from Meltdac was quite a hoot while new Nintendo developers Sony were showing off two film licences Hook! and Hudson Hawk. Yeah, I know I said Ocean were doing those two but for some reason, Sony are as well.

Microprose's F-15 Strike Eagle is the best Nintendo flight sim yet, Albie Rockin' Cais is certainly unusual and Dragon Warrior III from Enix is a great RPG (they also did Actraiser on the Super Famicom in case you were wondering).

MEGADRIVE MANIA II

Our very own Mirrored had Speedball II and Battle Master on display, Guardian Angels Safety Patrol and Bean Ball Benny. Arcade fans will enjoy Street Smier, Traco's superb conversion of the coin-op, and their version of Harrier Ext. is also worth a look.

More arcade stuff was seen on Namco's Virtua Fighter, Giga Legend is a two-player split screen version of the 4-Trax coin-op, and Rolling Thunder II is a brilliant rendition of the arcade machine that's yet to be released in Britain. Namco also showed off Powerball, a game very similar in concept to Speedball II, but nowhere near as good.

NEWS

SPECIAL REPORT

The Nintendo stand held a veritable meatball mountain of new and early new titles, all on display in the myriad of mini booths sponsored by third party manufacturers. I've decided to list them all (just to show you what's happening in the states), but before you ask, none have a release date in Britain as yet.

IT STARTED AT SAMMY'S

The first stand I walked into was manned by a company called American Sammy. Their three titles were Might and Magic: Secret of the Inner Sanctum, Rocky (based on the film) and Vice: Project Doom.

Sunsoft had Super Spy Hunter and Uforia, while UK people Virgin Games were showing off McKidds (somehow tied in with Ronald McDonald and co), Golf Power, Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves and Overlord (better known in this country as Supremo) - and it's a fab game to boot).

Arcade experts Taito were well flush with product and Kickmaster, Toki, The Flintstones, Rainbow Islands, Power Blade (the best Nintendo beat 'em up yet), Kiwi Kraze (the New Zealand Story sequel) and Qix completed an impressive line-up.

Jaleco were similarly loaded, and War on Wheels, The Last Ninja (same as the massively successful UK computer game), Metal Mech, In Your Face, Maniac Mansion (brill! Pinball Quest, Astynex (it's actually getting on a bit), Bases Loaded II, Goal, Totally Rad and Whomp 'Em were all on display.

▲ Jaleco giants - Totally Rad, Metal Mech, Fortified Zone and Whomp 'Em.

NEWS

SPECIAL REPORT

Big news at the show was the American launch of the Super Famicom, or the Super Ness (SNES) as it'll be called. It's got a new shape - a square body and vile purple reset and select buttons - and slightly updated internals (according to SNES programmers). Along with titles that have already been seen in Japan and on import in the UK such as Mario 4, Pilotwings, F-Zero and Ac-Transer, there were a whole new bunch on display - check out the list!

BIGGER AND BETTER

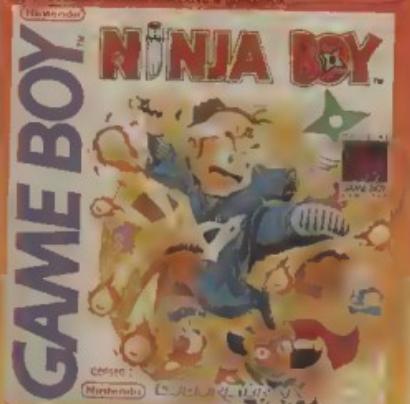

Let's start with the most important titles. An early demo of Batman TV was shown, and that looks identical to the coin-op, with much explosions and gratuitous violence (yum yum). WWF Wrestlemania Challenge is a cracker with super-lively graphics, great sound and wild, wacky gameplay. This is by far the best wrestling game yet seen, and stars the most popular WWF characters, like Hulk Hogan and the Ultimate Warrior. Finally there were a couple of demos of The Simpsons, showing sweet cartoon-style sequences that are apparently going to appear in the game. Watch out for it!

GAMEBOY A-GO-GO

The amount of Gameboy product announced and on display at the show was awesome. Over at Ultra, Blades of Steel (ice Hockey), Star Trek, World Circuit Series and Operation C were all in and about, while Atlass had two pogo inspired games, Spud's Adventures and A-Mazing Tater.

Ninja Boy from Culture Brain is nice, but Chapter II from U/C caused me to vomit and have a good laugh.

PALM-SIZED CLASSIC COIN-OPS

Coin-op fans will be pleased to hear that amongst many conversions appearing on the Gameboy, Paperboy II, Centipede II and Marble Madness will soon be available on the Mindscape label.

Ballistic have also taken a coin-op bent, but are choosing to go down the classic route with Atarioids (1978 rock-blazin' fun) and Muscle Command (1979 missile-blazin' frolics). Both should be well worth looking out for.

BUILT TO WIN

A very early demo running on Sega's stand was F1 BTW (Built To Win), a racing game which was very similar in style to F-Zero, but featuring racing cars instead of hovercraft. It certainly looks promising.

A big surprise was Data East's Caveman Ninja, a lawless copy of their latest arcade machine, which features hilarious cartoon-style graphics (you should see the expression on the caveman's face when he sees the giant dinosaur at the end of level one - his eye pop right out). They also announced Sanction Earth, but didn't get to see it.

AND THERE'S MORE

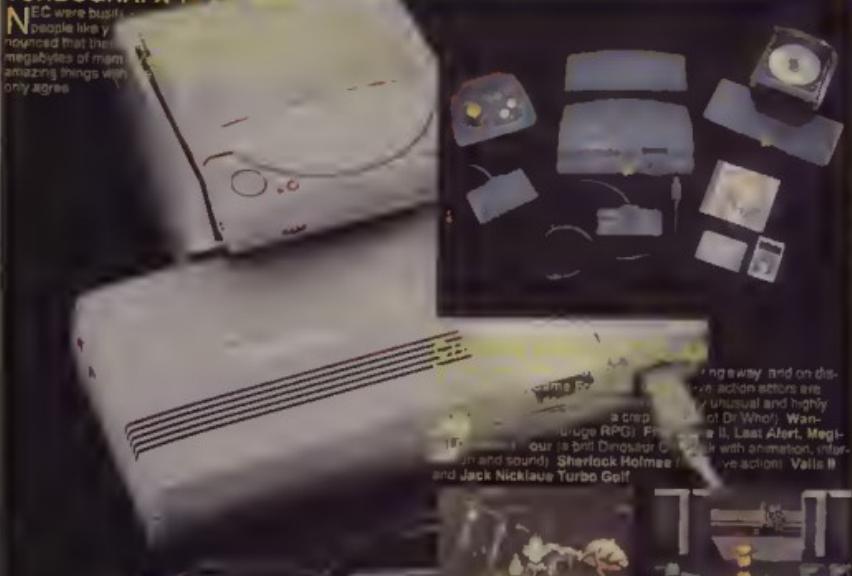

Super Play Action Football was Nintendo's SNES game announcement of the show, while Ultra Games showed Legend of Mystical Ninja and the rather excellent Castlevania IV.

On the Hudson stand, Bill Laimbeer's Comet Basketball looked like it needed quite a bit of work on it, and the Wonderboy-inspired Super Adventure Island seemed like fairly bland stuff.

Bassabel was in evidence with Jaleco, as they showed Super Bass Loaded, while THQ simply had press releases announcing that there were working on Home Alone, Swamp Thing, Pit-Fighter (that should be great), Vanilla Ice (aaaaagh), Family Dog (woof!) and Race Drivin' (now that will be interesting!).

TURBOGRAFX 16

BONK 'EM FAST

Bonk 'em hard! Bonk 'em fast! Bonk 'em small! As you can see, NEC had some Monitor advertising for their new Bonk II CPC Kid II as it's called in Japan. Obviously, they've got the same slogan living in the US as well. I'm not sure if the other stuff on the screen is real, but it looks like TV Special Football, Battle Royale, and some sort of racing and some other than the Megaman-like stuff. Tailspin, Landing Sun (same as the Amiga version), more (un)expected Yo Bro, Silent Disc, Tricky Kick and Sonic Spike.

ODDS 'N' ZODS

The legend of Zod was Vic Tozer's contribution to the Superboy line-up, while Konami were happy to put Castlevania II: Simon's Revenge, Double Dribble: 5 on 5 and Bill Elliott's NASCAR Fast Tracks up for public viewing.

Mercenary Force, Wанди и Castle Raid - Battle of Kingdom were Midway's fairly unmemorable ones, Battle Bull, Serial and Catrap (Arkanoid) were similar in quality to Midway's offerings, but Tectonic's Super Bowl and Ninja Gaiden were far more fun.

Capcom's Megaman and Who Framed Roger Rabbit were also good, as was Atomic Punk (known in the country as Bomber Man). Triumph and Adventure Island from Hudson.

Acclaim veterans will well remember Taito's Elevator Action, a conversion of the classic 8-bit, but their new The Knight Quest is completely original game.

Virgin Games hit the hand-held scene with Prince of Persia, a fabulous version of the very popular computer arcade adventure game (based on the 7-Up character) and Caesar's Palace, a Caesar 3D simulator.

Acclaim has a couple of good-looking titles - Simplicity in Escape from Camp Death and The Punisher is a pity Operation Wolf, after all.

NEWS

MEGADRIVE MEGA MACHINE!

After months of speculation, the Megadrive CD-ROM has finally arrived - and doesn't it look grand? Reports from Japan say the machine allows vast memory storage and improved graphics. There's a new chip inside the machine which allows more sprites and colours. It also allows the rotation of sprites - and even the Super Famicom can't manage that!

Sega Japan have set the release date from this mega machine at October, with a totally scrummy price of 200 or less. How much it will cost when it eventually makes its way over here remains to be seen - but we've got high hopes for this little beauty and it's not like Sega to disappoint.

NARC SPARKLE

Everyone's catching onto -

Even the music but! The current EP from the Pixies features Thema From Narc as one of its tracks - the theme tune from the Williams shoot 'em up! Whichever next - Jason Donovan sings theme from Sonic? A number one shot, we reckon!

KICK OFF SOCCER SHOCKER!

I could be a dream come true - the best footy game ever in the palm of your hand! The hot news is that those sporting folks at US Gold are planning to release Super Kick Off on the Game Gear in early 1992.

If portable Kick Off is anything like as fab as its computer daddy, this could well be THE hot cart of next year. Details are scarce right now, but we hear that veteran programmers Tierflex will be handling the conversion.

Super Kick Off comes amongst a trio of Game Gear releases planned by US Gold, all converted by Tierflex. The lot kicks off (sorry!) with World Class Leaderboard, due for release about now. Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade will be following hot on its heels in time for Christmas.

On the Megadrive, World Class Leaderboard and the God-father are set for 1992 release, with Indy doing his thing during the second quarter of the year, also taking the plunge on the Master System with Indiana Jones and the Fate of Atlantis.

"A BEAUTIFUL PUZZLE GAME WITH ASTONISHING HIDDEN DEPTHS"

"A good arcade adventure is a joy to play...and there's no shortage of gameplay here.
If exploring and solving's your thing, then there's enough here to keep you happy 'till the cows come home."

THE ONE

GHOST

The strangest things happen in fairy tales - but nothing so strange as the experiences you will encounter on your travels as Cortellus the Elf. Your magic ring can cast many spells, increasing in power as you tread deeper into the mystical lands of goblins and ghouls. Even the castle guards, low-life beings with the IQ of a cold-steel rivet, are on a get-smart campaign. They may seem a little backward to start with, but these river-headed, boar-bulles will soon become cantankerous, tricky-dickies if you let them. Many weird, villainous creatures and devious puzzles test your game-play technique and your gnomic powers. You can even control some of the background game features, allowing you to get to where you think you should be. Numerous secret areas lie deep within the forest where vital clues can help you with your quest, but beware...

YOUR OWN GHOST MAY MATERIALISE TO HAUNT YOU!

MEGADRIVE

£39.99

BY SEGA

What's small, blue, spiky, and very, very fast? Sonic the Hedgehog. That's who! Sega's awesome answer to Nintendo's marvellous Mario has arrived - and he's here to stay!

Sonic's a hedgehog with a mission: to free his furry friends from the diabolical clutches of the evil Dr Eggman (a villain so nasty he makes Al Capone look like Bonnie Langford)! Yes, Eggman captured all of Sonic's friends, brainwashed them and encased them in biomechanical armour - programmed to terrorise the world.

To free his friends, Sonic has to race through six zones, each consisting of three horizontally scrolling areas. These zones are packed with hazards and puzzles, not to mention Eggman's hordes out in force to turn Sonic into hedgehog pist! However, Sonic can fight back by curling into a ball and leaping into any enemy, skewering them on his spikes.

By collecting the magic rings which lie scattered around, Sonic is further protected - contact with an enemy is neutralised by the rings, but all the rings in Sonic's possession are dropped. Any rings remaining at the end of the level are exchanged for bonus points - if Sonic has more than 50, he'll be transported to the bizarre bonus level!

At the end of each zone, our sky-blue spiky hero is confronted by the doctor himself, armed with various weapons (including a massive ball and chain, a fire-splitting cannon and a large spike), intent on turning Sonic into hedgehog pie.

MONITOR MAYHEM 'N' MALARKEY

Hidden at various points around each area lie computer monitors, which below Sonic with a special bonus once bashed open.

RING Gives Sonic an extra 10 rings.

SPARKLE Encases Sonic in a glittering magic shield, which allows him to race through nasties without getting a scratch! Careful, though, as this is only temporary!

SHIELD Similar to before, but this surrounds Sonic with a large protective sphere, which vanishes upon contact with anything lethal.

MAGIC SHOES Makes Sonic even faster than avai (however difficult that may be!) Only temporary, but helps our spiky star reach parts of the level that other hedgehogs cannot reach.

SONIC Gives Sonic an extra life!

Sega said this was going to be good - but nobody prepared us for this! Sonic knocked me sideways when he burst forth from the monitor and hasn't let go since, hogging the Megadrive full-time. Sonic may be as cute as hell and play like a dream, but rest assured this game's as tough as your grandad's old boots. Sega have put a huge amount of thought into this, and it shows. The graphics are something very special - the best you'll see on the Megadrive. Sonic really looks the part as he charges around the screen, rolling into a ball and putting paid to all manner of bad guys as that superb Sonic theme tune blasts forth from the telly. Here's a game which absolutely oozes quality and one you'll return to time and time again. Sonic has thrown down the gauntlet to Mario in a big way and everyone's favourite Italian plumber must be feeling just a little washed out. I won't say he's necessarily better, but Sonic certainly gives the immortal Nintendos hero a run for his money. To sum up in three words - Brilliant! Brilliant! Brilliant!

SONIC v MARIO - WHO'S GOT THE EDGE?

Sega are pushing Sonic the Hedgehog as their answer to Nintendo's Mario. The sheer popularity of the round Italian plumber from Brooklyn gives Sonic a hell of a lot of work to do.

Comparing Sonic to Super Mario Bros 4 on the Super Famicom, it's obvious both have exquisite graphics and sound, although Sonic is a lot faster, brighter and more colourful. As far as depth of play is concerned, Mario 4 is a clear-cut winner - but Sonic is just so cute that at the moment you just have to call it a draw.

With these two superstars now in a head-to-head battle for supremacy, it's going to be fascinating to watch them try to top each other in all the explosive come! As usual, watch this space.

GIVE ME A RING SOMETIME

If Sonic has collected more than fifty rings before reaching the end of an area, a giant ring will appear at the finish. Leaping through this will whisk our spiky superhero off to the seriously strange bonus round - a rotating maze filled with rings and egg-heralds! Mastering this maze is no mean task, and soon your eyes will be spinning with the screen as Sonic slays all over the place!

LOVELY LEVEL LUNACY!

Sonic's world is split into six levels, each more treacherous and devious than the last.

1 - GREEN HILL ZONE This may seem like a green and pleasant land, but don't be fooled - hordes of crabs and flying adversaries are out in force to trash Sonic before he can start, as well as crumbling platforms which threaten to drop our hero into deep trouble!

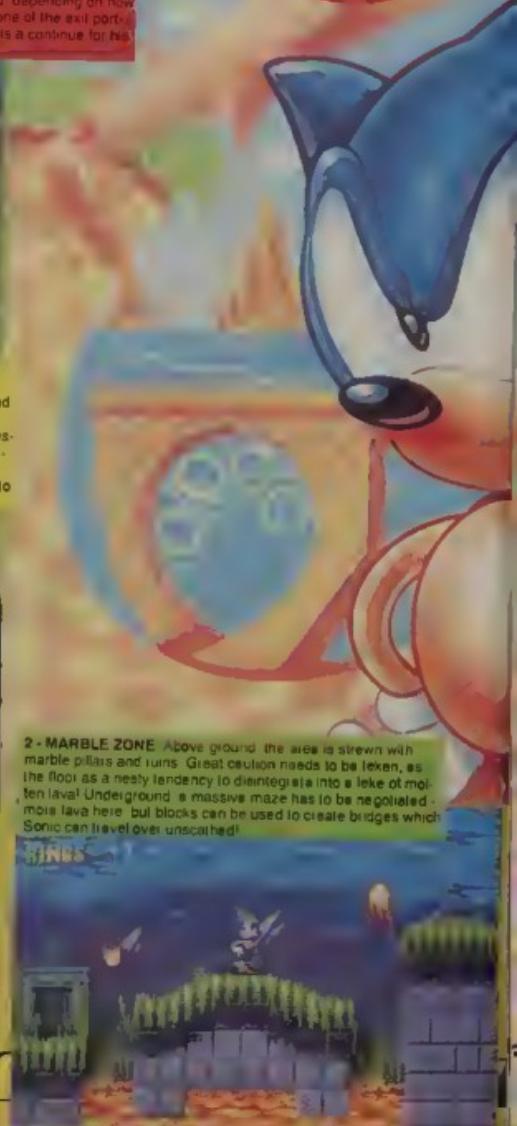

He's finally here! Sonic has at last made it onto the Megadrive - and how! The quality of this cartridge is assured the moment you flick the on switch and are greeted to a quartet of dulcet tones singing out the Sega name! So is this little blue milk guzzler the Mario buster that everyone suspects? Graphically there's no doubt - Sonic the Hedgehog is awash with lively, but never garish, colour, which complements the detailed sprites and backdrops perfectly. The animation throughout the game is top-notch, with Sonic's legs going hell for leather the longer you keep him running, and rolling up into a tight ball as only a hedgehog could do to biff those baddies into oblivion. Sound plays an important factor, with stacks of catchy tunes and jingles and songs absolutely brilliant spot effects. Sonic The Hedgehog is going to be an impossible game to beat, but you're sure going to have fun whilst you attempt it. Better than Mario? I honestly wouldn't like to say. What I will say, however, is that Sonic The Hedgehog is streets ahead of every game of this genre currently available, and I for one am looking forward to the further adventures of this garden-trotting little tinker!

2 - MARBLE ZONE Above ground the area is strewn with marble pillars and ruins. Great caution needs to be taken, as the floor has a nasty tendency to disintegrate into a lake of molten lava! Underground a massive maze has to be negotiated - more lava here but blocks can be used to create bridges which Sonic can travel over unscathed!

4 - LABYRINTH ZONE A lethal mixture of over and underwater mazes through which Sonic has to avoid mechanical fish and drill-nosed monkeys! The problem is, Sonic's only got small lungs, so can't hold his breath for long - air bubbles which seep up through the floor are his only hope!

3 - SPRINGYARD ZONE
Here the level becomes a lateral game of pinball, with Sonic being bounced around all over the place on contact with springboards and star-spangled bumpers! Loads of secret rooms can be found, filled to the brim with magic rings and bonus monitors!

5 - CLOCKWORK ZONE With lots of long drops, traps and finally the not-so-good doctor himself, this is the level to beat the lot! Crack this and you're well on the way to superstar Sonic status!

Mario Andretti - what a man! He's established himself as a champion in all forms of automobile racing since the '60s. Now this game lets you replay his driving career with yourself in the driving seat.

Like all young hopefuls you have to start your career by finding a cash backer. You first sponsor donates $20,000 to finance your first car, but all you can afford with that is a tiny Sprint car to race on the oval dirt circuits of North America.

In each race, you get a driver's-eye view through the windscreen of your race car, which is controlled either via keyboard or joystick. Either way, you only have to wrestle with accelerator, brake and steering controls, plus the optional cruise control.

There are big money prizes awaiting top drivers, and if you win enough races in the season, your sponsor will up his stake, allowing you to afford a different class of car and move your career one rung up the ladder. The best drivers end up racing 600 horsepower Indy cars in races which are the high point of the American season. Think you can make the grade?

MARIO ANDRETTI RACING CHALLENGE

The sprint car goes for the ton.

POS: 5

096 MPH

Electronic Arts have produced some stunning 3D games in the past, not least of them being Indianapolis 500, and while that was a great game it suffered a little from the fact that there was only one track, and consequently not that much to do. Mario Andretti's is the next logical step on from Indy, and it has as much hard racing action but it also has the depth of gameplay that Indy lacked. All the different tracks and the inclusion of the different racing classes make playing really competitive, because you've just got to get to the next stage of competition. The different car handle just as you would expect and the skill of the other drivers makes this feel more realistic than any other racing game I've played on a PC, or indeed any computer. Great graphics, excellent sound and brilliant gameplay at a good price make this an unmissable buy for power PC owners. Try it and see!

ANOTHER DISTINCTIVE RACING GAME

The programmers of this epic race game are Distinctive Software Inc, based in the USA. Name sound familiar? It's not surprising if it does, as DSI have produced a couple of other racing games on the PC, namely that excellent 3D Sports Driving, published by Mindscape, and that not-quite-so-excellent-but-still-pretty-good Test Drive 3, which was released by Accolade. Both these games used similar 3D vector graphics routines to Mario Andretti's Racing Challenge and if you like the look of what you've seen here you might take them for a spin.

No other versions planned at the moment, but that's what they said about Indy. Electronic Arts say they might well produce an Amiga conversion of Mario Andretti's Racing Challenge if the PC version goes down well.

MARIO ANDRETTI'S RACING CHALLENGE

SPRINT CARS This is what you start with - a tiny buggy with a 400 hp engine which can reach speeds of over 100 mph on the dirt circuits! All that power can mean you end up crashing on two wheels, so be careful!

The sprint car goes in for a refit.

MODIFIEDS Bigger, more stable and slightly faster than the Sprints, but naturally acceleration and responsiveness aren't as good. Built for rough racing, so don't be scared of shoving other cars aside on the corners.

SPONSOR SPOTLIGHT: MONSTER ENERGY DRINK

STOCK CARS

These cars are like everyday racers, their mighty V8 engines produce enough horse power to drive them around their concrete, oval courses at up to 200 mph. Of course, polite driving is contrary to the spirit of this

The stock car needs that reinforced windscreen.

PROTOTYPES Experimental engines, bodies and tyres are the order of the day in Prototype racing. A lot of major motor companies have a hand in this sport, so there are major investments being made and large purses for the winning drivers.

FORMULA ONE A big money sport which attracts the best drivers from 30 countries to the international races. The cars are light and aerodynamically designed to be supreme driving machines, which will take the driver to almost 250 mph.

The Prototype, which doubles as a handy personal snow-plough!

INDY CARS These are even faster than Formula One cars, though not much. They burn up the tarmac on nine different tracks worldwide in some of the most demanding motor races on the planet! This is the real test of a driver's skill!

024

Yours truly fancies himself as a bit of a driver - so how come I'm so crap? Simple - Mario Andretti's Racing Challenge is one tough mutha of a 3D racer, and probably the most fun you'll have without a helmet on! Racing with everything from buggies to super swift racers, you'll soon find the opponents are tough little trackers whose idea of a good time is to haarr you curse them from way, way behind. Graphically excellent, the programmers have done their darndest to get as much detail as they can into the game. The playback mode is particularly brill - watching one of your numerous cock-ups in tracking mode you can almost hear Murray Walker screaming in the background! Thankfully, Andretti's the main man here, popping up from time to time to report on your progress - or distinct lack of it! What with Chuck Yaeger's Air Combat last month and Mario this, EA are coming up with some incredible 3D product lately - and this is another Must Have from the maestros. Hurrah!

What's big, very bad and goes bump in the night? The amazing CVG Alien Storm competition, that's what! Here's a compo so big you'll go goosepimply just thinking about it and a prize so brill it'll send shivers right down your spine...

Call us monster raving loony, but we've got an incredible Sony portable TV and video player to give away! Amazing or what? It's all thanks to US Gold, celebrating their conversions of the monster arcade hit!

Just imagine: watch all your favourite monster movies in the palm of your hand and scare your friends silly as those 'orrible aliens jump out of the screen!

This incredible little piece of techno-gadgetry would normally set you back a cool £800 (just count those quids) but we're giving one away free, gratis and tor absolutely nothing! Amazing, eh?

We've previewed Alien Storm in last month's issue, and it's looking absolutely brilliant with all sorts of scary monsters to take on in a Golden-Axe style romp with big guns and laser whips! Converted by Tiertex, the team behind MERCS, Alien Storm looks set for stardom on home computers.

The GV300 Video Walkman with 4" LCD screen, VHF/UHF tuner, AM/FM Hi-Fi stereo, preset tuner and multi-Pal (???)

So what do you have to do to win US Gold's incredible prize? Here's the gen: we want you to draw us a truly monstrous alien. Not just any old extra-terrestrial but a truly horrible out-of-this-world fiend so scary we'll run screaming for mummy the moment we clap eyes on your creepy creation!

So get out your drawing stuff, create that creature on a nice clean sheet of paper, take a deep breath and actually pick it up, pop it in an envelope and send it off to: US GOLD'S MONSTER GIVEAWAY, COMPUTER AND VIDEO GAMES, PRIORITY COURT, 30-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON EC1R 3AU. Remember to include your name and address, or we won't know what to send the prizes! The winner will have his or her name printed in the magazine along with a selection of the best pictures (if they're good enough). So what on earth are you waiting for? Get cracking and scare us silly!

THE RULES

SMALL PRINT: OK, listen up. All those lovely usual CVG competition rules apply, which means if you have anything whatsoever to do with EMAP or US Gold you'd better not draw any aliens and enter or else. For this compo there's one special additional rule: anyone found to have copied their monster from any source whatsoever (especially the recent CVG glow-in-the-dark stickers!) will be shaved head-first into Jon's portable CD and forced to play Fire Mueleng for the rest of their natural lives. The Edi'or's decision is law and no correspondence will be entered into - which means we can't send back your drawings or explain why we thought your monster was utter crap. Sorry.

REVIEW

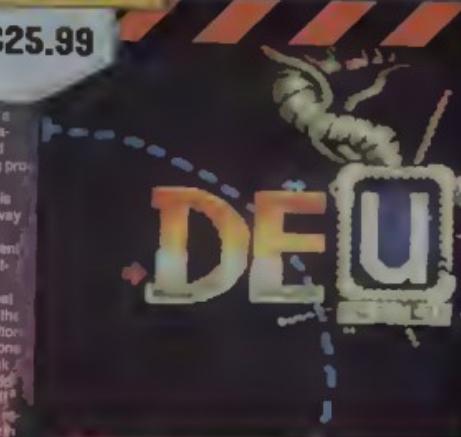

AMIGA
BY ACTIVISION

£25.99

Cloning is a tricky business, as discovered in Activision's first simulation of planet management, Millenium 2.2. Nowadays Mother Earth is but a shattered shell of its former self, and what little life remains must now set about a massive rebuilding programme.

But it ain't gonna be no pushover. The first thing to be done is train some of the public to actually do the jobs needed to get away from Earth - scientists, factory workers and, of course, space marines. Then there's the job of building the necessary equipment to mine, create ships and space stations, and generally do whatever is necessary to create a better life for the people.

The player is cast as president of the Earth, planning the great exodus to a new life. The future of the remaining populace is in the balance - if they can't build what they need, life will... die... be short... and they can't build without materials. It's a vicious circle, and you, as President, must break it if you are free by knocking together ships, creating new ones for them with the help of your scientists and then sending them into the wide, dark yonder of the galaxy to collect quirked by the production line to build, because that's not much.

Although Deutaros clings onto the same basic style of gameplay to Millenium 2.2, it's been sufficiently enhanced to make it more than just another hum-drum sequel. It's incredibly taxing on the brain, even though there's a host of different screens there to help you along the way. Although at times it can become frustrating, things don't become so bad that you want to hurt the machine out of the window and go back to blasting away at Alien Turtle Invaders IV. Graphics in this sort of software are usually there more for necessity than effect and, while there are a wealth of well-drawn pictures displaying, for instance, the different items you can build, they serve their purpose without being dazzling. The same goes for the sound effects, which I must admit are rather thin on the ground, but once you delve deep into the game the lack of noise is pretty unnoticeable. Summing up, a pretty game, but looks aren't important when you have the sort of complex, demanding and brain-draining challenge which Deutaros certainly is.

PAUL
RAND

YOU'VE NOTHING TO LOSE BUT YOUR LIVES...

First things first, you're going to have to train the workers to do the jobs you need. There are three main professions in Deutaros - Research, Production and Marines. Researchers create the designs for new ships and equipment, whilst the Production department, surprise surprise, builds the gizmos and whistles from the Researchers' blueprints. And until someone designs automatic pilots, the Marines hold the position of intergalactic anti-drivers.

UPDATE

Expect to see Deutaros touch down on ST soon at £25.99. No other conversions are planned.

PLANET MINING FOR FUN AND PROFIT

Centuries of exploration has left the Earth low on most natural resources and completely devoid of others. Luckily the rest of the Solar System has been relatively untouched and, if you can build equipment capable of taking you there, you can go and pilfer the valuable minerals available throughout the system, including those found on the newly-charted tenth planet of Decu-

POWER UP A POD

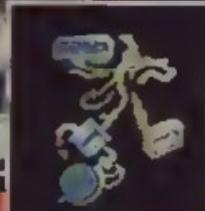

Or rather build one. There are three types of pod available to attach to your craft - Supply, Equipment and Cryogenic. Supply pods are used to transport minerals, whilst Equipment Pods are necessary to carry tools and pieces of space station to their desired destination. Cryogenic Pods, on the other hand, hold teams of workers, frozen in suspended animation to be revived when they reach their new workplaces.

Deuterio is strange. Very strange. So strange I just had to keep playing - first to find out what happened next, then because I just couldn't stop! Make no mistake - this is a game for the old gray matter and will take a little while to get to grips with. But once you realise what's going on you just have to keep going: sucked into this dreadful future world where just staying alive is all against the odds. Gloomy graphics and atmospheric background sound all add to the feeling of impending disaster, but you'll soon discover that this game has depths others can only aspire to. Strangely enough for a game of this type there isn't too much waiting around, because years can fly by in a matter of seconds before everything piles up in front of you and you realise there's some serious work to be done. Deuterio won't appeal to everyone, but those who do fall for its spail will wonder where on earth all the time went! If mega management sounds your cup of tea, buy this and enjoy a powerful piece of software!

NINTENDO
BY NINTENDO

£34.99

In the early 21st Century, the Earth, weakened by decades of environmental pollution, is under assault by vicious extra-terrestrial forces bent on savaging our world for what precious little resources remain.

Just one man stands between these foul creatures and global domination - Captain Skyhawk! He may have a silly name, but Cappy's packing enough firepower to do the business and save the planet from those evil alien hordes.

Thank goodness for that, eh?

SKY HIGH BLASTING BONANZA!

Equipped with the latest version of the F-14 Tomcat (capable of carrying Maverick and Phoenix missiles as well as wide ranging scatter bombs and armed with a deadly 20mm cannon), the Cap has to fly through five alien-infested levels, each split into three stages.

1 - LOW FLIGHT FIGHTING: The aliens have constructed numerous bases across the face of the planet, and Skyhawk's got to make sure these are put out of commission - permanently! This may sound simple, but when you've got hordes of enemy fighters, ground tanks, anti-aircraft cannons, and all sorts of lethal weaponry trying to fry the good Captain's undercarriage, it becomes rather much more difficult! On Iolar levels, much-needed supplies have to be air-dropped to storage bases as well. Crumbs!

It's not difficult to tell it's summer - all the software houses are obviously thinking about going on their hole as opposed to coming up with fresh, new ideas. Take Captain Skyhawk for instance. Actually, don't - it's all been done before, and better. The game is a mish-mash of contrasting styles, from Zaxxon to Afterburner to Elite; from which the docking sequence has obviously been lifted (albeit somewhat less impressively). Captain Skyhawk isn't a bad game as such, in fact I quite enjoyed playing it for a time until I realised how ordinary it is. Rare, so famous for quality cartridge software, are doing themselves no favours with their latest releases. We are talking so-so graphics, disappointing sound and a difficulty setting which seems to drop the further you progress. My advice is take a good, long look at Captain Skyhawk before delving into their wallet, otherwise you may be left feeling a bit shortchanged.

PAUL
RAND

2 - BURNER RETURNS: Yep, that's right - this level is like a simplified version of the Sega coin-op. Enemy lighters roar in and out of the screen and Skyhawk's just got to blow as many out of the air as possible! Of course his adversaries don't take too kindly to this, and aren't afraid to let off a few missiles of their own to blow Skyhawk's lighter away!

MISSILE MALARKEY

Once you have docked, you can buy additional weapons from the shop. Here's a list of what's on offer:

AIMS4 PHOENIX: Standard missile, utilised by present-day carrier based F-14 Tomcats. Used during Level 2 to knock out difficult-to-hit enemy fighters.

MAVERICK AGM: Stands for air-to-ground - used on Level 1 for taking out ground bases, anti-aircraft guns and ground assault vehicles.

CANNON: Starts as a standard, slow-firing 20mm cannon, but can be upgraded to a weapon of severe fire power!

HAWK BOMBS: Similar in style to cluster bombs, these split into three separate warheads, therefore increasing the amount of damage!

LEVEL 3 - DOCK IT TO ME. Rather like the docking sequence from Elysium, here a Skyhawk has to line up his Tomcat with the docking bay entrance before kicking in the thrusters to take him inside the orbiting space station. Not that easy when the station is constantly rotating - miss the entrance, and Skyhawk II ends up a frozen collection of flesh and shrapnel! Success, however, will allow access to the armoury, where additional weapons can be purchased!

The fate of the world and its remaining population hangs in the balance - only the Captain can save the day!

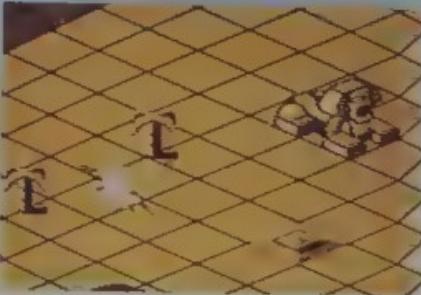

REVIEW

CAPTAIN SKYHAWK

NOT SO RARE, REALLY...

Rare (formerly known as Ultimate, reknowned for their gob-smackingly great Spectrum games back in the mid-eighties) are definitely a force to be reckoned with when it comes to Nintendo games. Two of their latest titles - Solar Jetman (the latest title to feature the intergalactic loony, and soon to be converted to computers by Storm), and Snake, Rattle and Roll (which scored a whopping 95% back in issue 112) - both feature stunning graphics, incredible sound and gameplay addictive enough to have you superglued to your screen for ages!

I didn't think Captain Skyhawk was THAT bad, but I have to agree that it isn't one of Rare's better games. The worst thing you can say about it is that there isn't quite enough to each of the three games to make each one worthwhile. It would have been better to base the whole game on the low-level flight section, because the Afterburner bit is pretty dull, and the docking bit just seems pointless. Once you get quite a way into Captain Skyhawk, the action speeds up a lot showing what good programming can achieve on a Nintendo. Unfortunately, while the programming is top notch, the game design is where the flaw lies, and though Skyhawk is better than many Nintendo games, Rare are capable of much more, as they've shown with Snake, Rattle 'n' Roll, Solar Jetman, Cobra Triangle, etc. Not a top-of-shopping-list game, but definitely worth considering.

GAME FOR A LAUGH?

CRACK US UP AND WIN A FAMICOM!!

COURTESY OF CONSOLE CONCEPTS

Here's your chance to win an fabulous Super Famicom - and amaze your friends with the ultimate shoot 'em up for the best gemee machine in the known universe!

Hot or what? We've got a brand new Famicom up for grabs, together with two free games including Super R-Type - the brilliant beatle EVERYONE wants to see.

Those fine gamemasters at Console Concepts (a division of PC Engine Supplies) have come up with the giveaway goodies for this great CVG Compo. Thenke to them, our lucky winner gets a Famicom with trea game end than Super R-Type the very second (well, near enough) it's released in Jepant

Even our resident arcade ace Julian Rignell wee left speechless by the sheer brilliance of the Super R-Type demo he saw in Chicago. ("It's the best thing I've ever seen!" - Jaz). Experts say the Famicom game is actually BETTER than the arcade game, with all the beat blets from the original end bonus levale thrown in!

So what do you do to win this elice of pura perfection? Simple really, just:

1. Think of the silliest thing you can do with a console, the funnier the better.
2. Do it and take a photograph, or
3. Draw it on a nice clean sheet of plain paper.

Then:

1. Admire your rib-tickling handwork until you collapse in howls of laughter, tears streaming from your eyes.
2. Pick yourself up from the floor.
3. Pop it into a suitable envelope together with your name, address and age and send it off to: CRAZY CONSOLE CONCEPTS COMPO, COMPUTER AND VIDEO GAMES, PRIORY COURT, 30-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON EC1R 3AU.

Remember, we're not looking for an artistic masterpiece - humour and originality are what really count. We'll print a selection of the best entries (if they're good enough) - so do make them decent! Plus, who knows, the winner may even get his or her picture in the mag! What era are you waiting for? Get those thinking cape on now and crack up the CVG crew with your jolly jape!

Small print: All the usual CVG rules apply, so don't be a silly Billy and enter if you're an employee or associate of EMAP or Console Concepts or your first name is Peregrine or you're Bernard Manning or Bob Monkhouse or you don't know what a Famicom is or you don't want to win one. This Editor's decision is final and absolutely no entries will be returned, even if you've wasted money on an SAE. Sorry. That's life. Tough eh? So is writing the small print at the bottom of competitions...

LOWDOWN

Who says CVG never covers Lynx games? Atari's latest Lynx foursome are some of the best yet, and here's Paul Glancy and special guest star, Rob Swan, to tell you all about them.

WARBIRDS

£29.99

Whal-ho! Reach for the skies over the Western Front in this World War One biplane sim. Make your plane as unstoppable as you like then start on one of six missions, flying against one, two or three computer opponents of varying skill. Alternatively, up to four players can "Lynx-up" for a right old aerial gang-fight.

Your combat in the clouds is depicted in inflate-spire 3D which, though not as astonishing as Blue Lightning, is still impressive. As you would expect, the controls aren't as complicated as a computer flight-arm and the speed control (an engine on-off switch) though extremely simple, is effective you need to perform tight turns.

There isn't a lot of variety to the gameplay (it would have been nice to have something other dogfights to participate in - a bombing mission for example) but what's there is good fun for a while.

APB

£29.99

A PB is a conversion of one of Atari's slightly oddball cops which puts the player in the driving seat of a California Highway Patrol car. Every morning you're given a quota of lawbreakers to apprehend, and if you don't meet the quota before your time or fuel runs out, boy does the sergeant get annoyed!

When the car's siren is activated a target appears in front of it which you have to place over the felon of your choice who meows vociferously as he pulls over. Don't run into any innocent drivers or drive your car through innocuous doughnut stands because that earns demerits, and ten demerits earns you instant dismissal from the force!

APB is a lot of laughs to play, and it includes a load of the arcade game's sampled speech which really livens things up. Even if you weren't a fan of the cop-a, this is well worth looking up.

LYNX DOWN

NINJA GAIDEN

£29.99

Anyone who was a fan of Tecmo's Shadow Warriors coin-op will be instantly familiar with this game, because it is, in fact, the same game! Not surprisingly, you play the Ninja of the title who is given the unenviable task of beating up loads of muscle-bound baddies in hockey masks and fat men throwing telephone poles around - and that's just on level one!

Telephone boxes, oil drums and various other objects lie scattered around, and if broken, reveal all manner of Ninjutsu goodies, such as swords, extra energy, gems and extra lives. The masked marvel can also grab hold of lampposts, and can swing back and forwards - any mug stupid enough to get in the way cope a pair of size ten in the face!

For the Lynx's first beat 'em up, Ninja Gaiden is a little short of superb, and really addictive too. An excellent title, and one which any self-respecting Lynx owner should race out and shell out for at once.

PACLAND

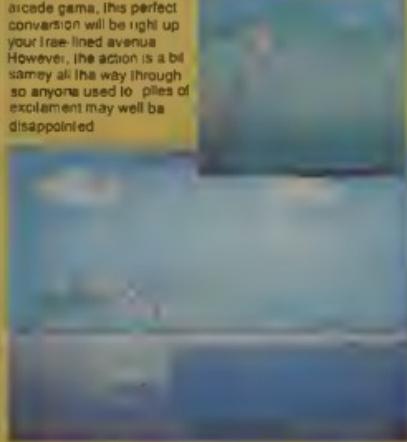

£29.99

Pac's back! That munching yellow beach ball returns once again, this time in a conversion of the Namco coin-op that was itself a spin-off from the TV cartoon show. As usual Pac-Man is up to his neck in hassle, because this time he's found a stricken fairy, and has to return her to Fairyland.

Not an easy prospect, however, as this involves haring through the horizontally-scrolling PacLand, whilst avoiding those ever-present ghosts (who have taken to driving around in taxis and敞气车!) Of course, Pac can temporarily turn the tables by munching a power pill, and in turn, chomp on a ghost or two!

If you were a fan of the arcade game, this perfect conversion will be right up your tree-lined avenue. However, the action is a bit samey all the way through so anyone used to piles of excitement may well be disappointed.

YOB'S

IT'S AN OUTRAGE - HONEST!

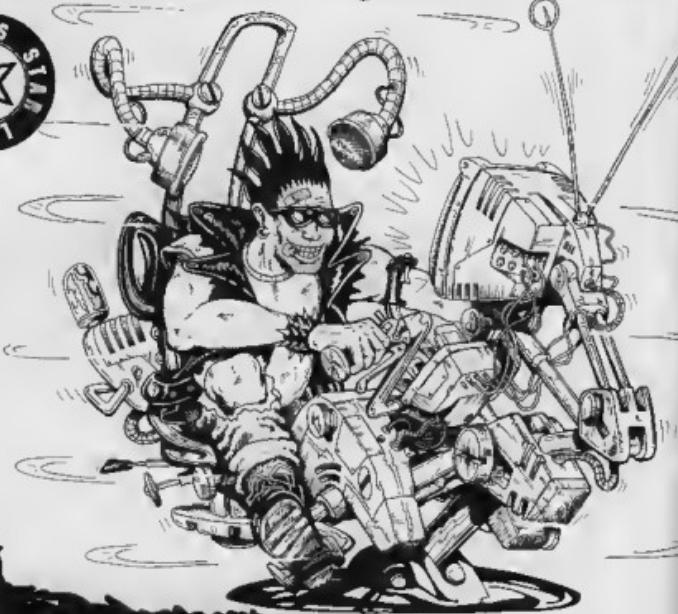

Dear YOB,

Now than young man, you'd better get your hands out of your pockets and pay attention, because I've got a very important message to tell you. I think that every single game in the universe should be banned. Now that may seem just a laaansy-waansy bit harsh to some body who's ill-educated as yourself, but I have a few points with which to back up my theory. Computer games have been corrupting innocent youngsters ever since time began. Just look at the ancient Unclown, for example. Why my young son had only been playing that for a few minutes when, blow me down, he decided to build a spaceship in his bedroom and, in no time at all, he was larrioshing the seven planets of Plagibottom! It just goes to show how difficult youngalers find it to separate games from reality. I also think that the Dizzy games should be banned. Another young son of mine had been playing a few Dizzy games all week when the young urchin suddenly decided to make his own Dizzy costume and walk the streets whilst wearing it. It was a sad day indeed, when he walked straight off a seventy-foot cliff because he couldn't see where he was going...

It's an outrage! I'm sure you agree that all computer games should now be immediately banned.

Daniel Salter, Rotharham, S Yorks

YOB: Too right. I know e young men (not my son, whatever the judge saye) who was tried to a crip sticking his fingers into the cartridge slot of his Magadrive to see whether it had Virtual Reality built in. He was an idiot, though - just like you.

YOB! Yob's Mailbag goes global this month, with letters coming in from all sorts of far-flung places! I'm quite chuffed about this 'cos it gives me a chance to do my bit for diplomacy by chucking out a few choice international insults. Got something to say? Drop me a line at: YOB'S MANIC MAILBAG, COMPUTER AND VIDEO GAMES, PRIORY COURT, 30-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON EC1R 3AU. Best letter of the lot gets a whopping £100.00, which this month goes to Daniel Salter for daring to demand the impossible!

3. When will it be out in Australia?

4. Is 512k enough for Shadow Warriors, It Came From The Desert and Wings?

5. How am I supposed to buy from Software City or Worldwide Software when we dudes down in Australia use a different currency?

6. Any chance of a T-shirt? Andrew Colling, Tasmania, Australia

YOB: 1. Yee.
2. Probably.

3. Where's that, exactly?

4. Yaa. No. No.

5. Buy sterling, you Down Under dunces.

6. After all that? Do me a favour!

DUMMIES DOWN UNDER

Dear YOB,

I love your magazine. Last Christmas me and my sister got an Amiga 1000 and I think it's a pretty good machine. After your review of Escape from the Planet of the Robot Monsters and Budokan I got both of them. They're pretty good games. Sorry about the questions but I think they're pretty important.

- Will there be a conversion of Final Fight on the Amiga?
- How will 512k of memory be enough?

GLOBAL LETTER N°1

COME ON, PLAY THE GAME!

Dear YOB,
I've become very concerned in the past few months with the video gaming industry. Too many companies are manufacturing games which are simply variations on a theme. When will someone come on the scene and breath life into the games? Although it may be true that many new games have superior graphics and audio capabilities, it's also true that many games are unimaginative or have little quality gaming. How often must we rescue our girlfriends from some rebel gang, overthrow an evil king or save the world from an alien invasion? It's even worse when a game presents an innovative storyline but then fails to carry out the promise on-screen.

It also seems that the lifespan of games is shorter. Many games that are supposed to be long and difficult can be polished off in a matter of hours or days. What is going on?

I hope that someday the giants of this industry will realize that people are looking for real storylines, not just an excuse to kill somebody. Most companies seem more concerned with cranking out a quick shoot 'em up for a quick quid than producing a playable game with real value. When consumers purchase games they look for company names with past successes. If we're disappointed when we get home, we're going to be wary of buying games from that company again.

Neil J Smith, Ashford, Middle YOB: So where were you while the rest of the computer games world grew up, eh? Still playing the first level of Jet Set Willy? There's some sense in what you say, but you're about a year out of date since there are some truly great games coming onto the market right now. I could reel off so many it's hard to know where to start - so I won't. Next...

I'M NO CREEP, BUT...

Dear YOB,

Don't want to make a complaint #@%$@! of myself so I won't say anything like 'Print my letter or I'll get my big brother to come round and knock you all the way to Bristol!' or 'Give me a T-shirt or I'll come round and kick your measly little head in!' like all the other readers do.

Also, I don't have a whole page full of questions like 'When did you last have your hair cut', or any naff stuff like that. But I wonder if you could tell me, are there any plans for a Mario Bros game on the Amiga? Why does it have to be on the #@#%ing Ninja?

Mega C, Totley, Sheffield

YOB: Before starting work on this month's Mailbag I decided I would award £100 to the first person who threatens or insults me personally - but nobody has! Funny old world, eh?

GLOBAL LETTER N°2

FREAKY FUN FROM GERMANY!

Dear YOB,

Hello you freaks in the crew of your great CVG Magazine, I'm a German reader and would like to tell you, that your magazine is great! Well I have a lot of Videogames at home: a PC Engine with 20 great games, a Nintendo NES with 20 great games, a Megadrive with 25 great games and a Power Base Converter for the Mega Drive and 30 Games for it. I also have a Amiga 1000 with 25 MB RAM, a Sidecar with 640 Kbyte Ram and Hard disk, 1 axl 5 1/4" Flopy and 1 axl 3 1/2" Flopy which I use with both.

It's a good and great fact, that your magazine is the most actual I know: I was glad to see that you were the first magazine to test the excellent Final Match Tennis for the PC-Engine, the brilliant Mickey Mouse Game for Mega Drive and the great Eye of the Beholder for the Amiga.

Well, and I think your magazine is too expensive for too few ($5,50 DM for 115 pages). Take a look at our German's Power Play - it has about 150 Pages for just 6,50 DM! And I've got a copy of a Double-bought Power Play to this letter. You can have it, I don't want it back! That's because I've gotten so much of your magazine in the past so that I want to make a gift to your great magazine. Well, but I'm not sure if all of you speak and understand German, but your Richard Leadbitter seems to do, as he writes in the last issue I have of your CVG magazine that his machines begin to communicate in Spanish, but that he understands German cause he learnt it at school. So if the real of you can't understand and read the Power Play, then the magazines must

THIS BAND SHOULD BE BANNED

Dear YOB,

I went down to the newsagents to collect my copy of Mean Machines the other day (wondering, of course, when CVG will be out), and when I got home I layed on my bed, took the tacky, brown paper bag off my new mag which, of course, was COMPUTER AND VIDEO GAMES!

WOW! Too good to be true! I looked through the mag improvement, improvement, improvement. Nothing but improvements! Smart stuff! I won't bother with Mean Machines after all (only kidding!).

After all that waffling, I'd like to congratulate you on your new-look improvement! Also, before you shove me off the letters page to make room for the spotty kid who persists in arguing that his rubbery keys Spectrum is better than the Super Famicom, I'd like to ask if you could include a Final Fight or Super Mario Bros poster in one of your future mags. It will be greatly appreciated!

David Lockbeyne, Mithouses, Sheffield

PS: You don't have to print this letter, but let me put it this way, if you don't my killer elastic band will sort you out! You'll find him inside the envelope, ready to pounce!

YOB: If you don't seek immediate help I'll pop my homemade killer Trident Misilia in the post, aimed in the general direction of Sheffield. If anyone else has made something equally embarrassing which they'd like us to ridicule them about, send it along to the usual address. Who knows, there may be a prize for the most ridiculous item (or then again, there may not).

A REVIEWER WRITES...

Dear YOB,

Hara is a review of Skull & Crossbones that I have written myself Skull & Crossbones. It is crap. There it is. What do you think?

James Stratton,

Altringham, Cheshire

YOB: When can you start?

be at least something for your Richard Leedbetter! Well and I have to say that Richard is my favourite game-tester (or should I say staff writer?) because he's critical enough and his favourite games seem to be my favourite games, too. (We seem to have the same liking!)

In the 4/91 issue the article on page 15 is funny, I think, (about Richard) because Richard looks a bit like the 'famous five's Dick', but it is improbable that he has been the inspiration for Enid Blyton to create the Famous Five's Dick, because the Famous Five are nearly about 20 years old, and I think that Richard is just between 18 and 23 years old today so that he was too young to be an inspiration when the famous five's Dick figure was created.

My other hobbies are watching Pro Wrestling, Tennis, Ice Hockey and Football on TV, I like the Pop Music of Jason Donovan and Kylie Minogue, who are very popular in Germany and in the UK, as well as the music of David Hasselhoff, who is very popular in Germany. So, I hope for a quick answer and wish you a lot of success with CVG Magazine.

Marco Gehring, Heford, W Germany

YOB: A quick answer? Goodby.

ENGINE HASSLE? GET IT TAPE!

Dear YOB,

For those who are currently saving up for a brif PC Engine GT (like me) and who are worried about the awkward screen, I have a solution. Using some sellotape just modify a Game Light (the one with a magnifying glass) to fit on your GTI. Can't do anything about the screen blurring but it should solve the indistinct sprite problem. By the way, do you get a mains adaptor with the GT so you don't have to rely on batteries all the time? Also is the price (currently 250 at its cheapest) likely to go down soon or in the future?

Myo Thaung, Brighton, E Sussex

YOB: Want a PC Engine GT but can't afford 250? Simplar. Buy an ordinary PC Engine and, with a hacksaw, whittle it down to the appropriate size. Then simply glue a Sony Watchman to the top and, hey presto, loads of broken bits to sellotape back together.

GET A GRIP ON YOURSELF!

Dear YOB,

I am writing to you from the far distant future to aid you in your quest to find out what the fates have in store for computer gaming. Here in my time, one and all, Persuasive force has a stranglehold over the entire compute community, leaving all the other computer systems out in the cold. The brilliant Amiga C800 with stunning mind-graphics and twin read/write CD drives doesn't even get a look in. Even the Alan STFM-P-FMP-TOS Enhanced 2 Million+ with twin 32-bit processor and dedicated 88000 graphics processor is left for dead.

In fact, the only other computers that are permitted by the Emperor (Bern Bert Miles (known as IBM) are the IBM range, the last of which is the PS/5 80986. No other computers are allowed. Actually, this isn't too bad, since the graphics standard of the new model is the SE-EXGA Professional, with a resolution of 2560x2048 in more colours than the eye can discern. The PS/5 also has a 98-bit processor running 100 mips. This PC costs $1BM7560, that's the equivalent of 500 of your Times Pound floppies.

Admittedly, excluding all competition by death threats is not a nice way to carry on, but IBM is backed by the Emperor so they can get away with it.

As for software, there is a slight deficiency here - only one game is allowed, but luckily it is an amalgamation of virtually all game styles - Incredibly interesting, deep and great fun too. The name of the game? Elite 20.

The aim of the game is to become Elite, and fly your ship (preferably in the PS/5's hydraulic cabinet) watching the unbelievable 3D graphics - 95,000,567 polygons are used for the torpedoes alone. Once you have attained Elite status you become the real-life Prime Minister of Earth Colony 08 - planet Earth - but as yet there are colossal problems replacing John Major. So there you have it. The future of gamesplaying is Elite 20 on the PC. An utterly amazing game with mindblowing graphics and blinding depth of gameplay. However, there is one downfall in the program; a small flaw in the computer's design that causes a great loss in the gamesplaying experience. It's like this...when IBM designed their first 8086 PC they did not envisage it as a games machine, and only provided a pathetic sound chip and tiny speaker. Even add-on sound cards were wiped out when IBM refused to provide them as standard.

Since then, IBM have not been bothered to upgrade the PC sound, so whenever you let off a huge, 95,000,567 polygon torpedo glistening into the moody starlight with its awesome exhaust trail, you get a little beep to show it has launched. And another if it destroys the enemy. And when you converse with an alien, well...err...

Justin Dar Gregorian (13). Citizen number 743476879644-82556

YOB: Just think, there are a lot of people out there who have struggled from their beds, fought through the traffic and worked a 16-hour double shift to print the crap above.

WILL CHEAP CHIPS RUIN MY MEMORY?

Dear YOB,

How's things down your way? Up here things are definitely not good. I have owned an Amiga 500 for just over a year now and I thought it was about time I got a 512K expansion for it. One problem though, I was thinking of getting it from one of the mail order places advertised in your great mag for about 40-60 but my friend says that for the price they are bound to ruin my games. This worried me a bit so, if you could set the record straight I would be very grateful.

George Watson, Kirkham, Lancs

YOB: Luckily your chum is talking a load of vindaloos revenge. Cheap doesn't always mean nasty and if you're around you can get what you're after for less than thirty quid! Use the cash you save for a portable welding torch with which to shut your painful pal's gob once and for all.

LOADSA LAFFS

Dear YOB,

You sounded mighty miserable last month so I have sent some jokes in for your multi-eaten Mailbag. Hera we go

Rene Ahuja, Luton, Beds
YOB: What do you get if you annoy me with rotten jokes first thing in the morning?

Nothing at all.

ASK SOME SILLY QUESTIONS...

Dear YOB,

I think your meg is brill. Anyway, I think young people under eighteen should be allowed to go into amusement arcades and play on boss games like Herc and Final Fight. Could you answer my meekly little questions.

1. Is the STFM better or worse than the STE?
2. What's a modem?
3. Can you get a modem for the ST?

Stuart Lee, Allerton, Liverpool
P.S. I think you're well 'erd.

YOB: 1. Why do you care?
2. You mean you don't know?

3. If you don't know what it is, why do you want one?

P.S. I think you're a wossat of specia.

LITTLE SIS DRIVES ME ROUND THE TWIST!

Dear YOB,

I have been getting your mag every month and I think it is great. I have an Amiga 500 and can't get the game The Last Ninja to work. Maybe it's because my little sister has been jumping up and down on the disk - I don't know.
What do you think I should do about it?

Dean Meacock, Tiverton, Devon

YOB: Don't be too harsh.
Just tell your little sister that you don't blame her, then shove her into the disk drive and turn on your machine.

GALACTIC CASH MERCY APPEAL

Dear YOB,

I have run into some family problems recently. I am short of cash and need to help my poor 762-year-old grandmother who is in hospital at the moment (violin music can be heard in the background). After dropping acid, she freaked out and hijacked a school bus full of orange penguins. That's not all. In a tragic accident my green, martian brother was launched into space and is probably on Venus by now. Imagine, he's up there on some god-forsaken planet, dodging gamma rays. Not a pretty thought. I am starting a one-million pound project to get him back, and what we need is a kind, handsome and gallant YOB to help us out. Say, one hundred pounds in cash would cover it nicely. My grandmother would be very grateful, she takes to nice, kind, handsome, gallant YOBs.

Whenever I see a new edition of CVG, I inform Yoda on my special intergalactic, digitsod, fuel-injected, seven-week old smelly kipper. After that, I flick through the pages until I find these two, then read the letters and your comments. If I crack up and fall to the floor in small, hexagonal pieces then I buy it. If not, I don't.
But that has never happened yet. I love to scoff at the critters that attempt to write interesting letters; they are about as interesting as Bongo the Clown dancing to 'Oh boy, my pimple's turning yellow' with a five-year-old cheese and pickle sandwich lodged up his bum.

If you at CVG want to own the latest in never-washed, yellow polka-dot socks with holes in them, send one hundred pounds in cash to me and the order for the socks to Neptune
Sadism Hussein (aka Nick Shreck), Truro, Cornwall

YOB: Call me a sentimental old fool, but I've taken pity on your martian brother and mailed off 100 cash to Venus. Thenke for bringing the sibling's plight to my attention and I'm sure he will reward your kindness in some way.

NIGHTMARE WORLD OF VIRTUAL REALITY

Dear YOB,

It's frightening, isn't it? I mean, if in ten years we can go from ZX81s to Amigas, just think where we'll be in ten years from now.
I was thinking of giving my Amiga to my sons or daughters, but I suppose it would be like giving them a ZX81 because they will want the latest Virtual Reality kit complete with headset and gun which actually stuns your best mate and leaves him paralysed for half an hour. Can anyone even imagine what our grandchildren are going to be playing to keep them entertained? I think Virtual Reality is the next big step forward, but how far do we went to go?
Gary Ventress, Market Weighton, York

YOB: Frightening, isn't it? In just a few years' time computers will be able to simulate people like this and we'll be snowed under with their boring but oh-so-sensible letters until everybody goes stark staring mad and puts Mellbag pages together for a living.

GLOBAL LETTER N°3

WHO AM YOU DOING?

Dear YOB,
How do you do? I like that kind of man with punk hair and a headbang-face like you. At first I got a few questions.
Here they are:
1. (Is) Does Super Mario
Bro. IV. Super Mario World ever seen the light at the NES?

2. Do you love Sedia? I read something like this, in issue 115:

3. I bursting out laughing when I see the little picktures by the letters. Do you make them?

4. Is the pinball table of the Simpsons really worth 2,500?
In Holland the Super Famicom will be released in 1995,
I hope and which game(s)
are standard?

At least I would make a compliment to the previewers Richard, Rob, Julian and Paul.
They do great work!
Jeroen V Brussel, St Joost,
Holland

PS My English isn't very well and I hope you can read this letter.

YOB: I am reading this letter with perfect simple and am answering the questions like this:

1. I am not thinking Super Mario World (he) does see the light at the NES.

2. I also read something else like this, but em saying not no or yes.

3. The little pickles are so funny, they make me bursting my belly too as well.
Makes them, Art Editor Jon does yes.

4. The pinball-table of the Simpsons is yes really worth 2,500 if Simpsons
you emliking.

I cannot be answering the Super Famicom question for you, ss because I em not hara having the foggiest idea what you can be talking about of this.
The previewers ell will be saying Thenke to your compliment, end ell are hoping for you that the previ-wing is very fina.

They said it would never happen, and now it has. World War III has arrived, and you're slap bang in the firing line.

3D THRILLS 'N' SPILLS!

M1 Abrams features possibly the best true-world 3D yet seen on the Megadrive

Sega's little black beauty is shifting some serious maths to keep everything moving smoothly in a believable fast-action battlefield.

This probably has quite a lot to do with the input of Realtime Software. Those three dimensional maestros responsible for Carrier Command and Battle Command

In fact M1 is best described as a kind of halfway house between the complexities of Battle Command and simple thrills and spills of the classic Alan Alda arcade Battlezone. The game is finely balanced between realism and playability leaving you to choose between a quick blast and an early bath or a long, careful campaign and some medals to shine in your old age.

CHECK YOUR WEAPONS!

The M1 may be the best battle tank in Europe, but this yankee doodle dandy wouldn't be worth diddly squat without some high class weaponry to back it up. Here are the shooters to shoul about.

COAX: This multi-purpose machine gun comes in well handy for close quarter combat. It's also supposed to be used against enemy aircraft who stray too close, but whose going to be dumb enough to sit behind this and stare down the barrel into the jaws of an incoming attack chopper? Not me, matey!

SMOKE: Definitely handing when the enemy air pants-wettingly close, your smoke discharger belches out all sorts of muck to mess up enemy guidance systems and make you all but invisible and ready to crash into the nearest wall cos you're blind as a bat as well.

CANNON: Your Rheinmetall 120mm cannon fires three types of round, range depending on which you choose. The shells available are:

SABOT: An armor-piercing, fin-stabilized round which cuts through armour like a hot knife through butter at anything up to 2,500 metres.

HEAT: A high explosive anti-tank weapon which detonates before contact with the target, producing fiery gas which melts almost everything up to 2,000 metres.

AX: An experimental wire-guided anti-helicopter shell which is slow to load because it's one big and complicated piece of kit with a range up to 4,000 metres.

ABRAMS M1 TANK

TOR SERIES

MAKE TRACKS WITH THE BEST...

M-1

It takes four highly trained, super tough, bubble-gum-chewing yanks to man your average M1 - and every man, jock of them has his work well and truly cut out! You can take the controls for all four - Driver, Gunner, Loader and Commander - and are expected to become quite an all-round ace to delve deep into the game.

Taking on all four roles, it's crucial to sort out your strategy or you'll end up as scrap metal while the enemy lumbers onward. You won't get far if you sit in one place and shoot everything in sight - the enemy outnumbers you ten times over and those scary Soviets just keep on coming.

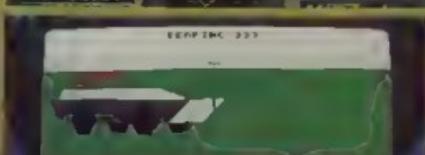

TANKS FOR EVERYTHING...

M1 gives you the chance to battle through the entire World War II campaign or chicken out and take on individual missions. Here's what you can expect:

The Moselle Defence: The Sovs have cut through Allied defences! There's one thing standing between the West and the advancing metal hordes - you!

ARMAMENT:
120mm gun, two
7.62mm machine guns and a 12.7mm
anti-aircraft gun

Ho-hum. A tank game on the Megadrive. Where are the extra lives, the power pods, the end-of-level guardians? Ahh, but there aren't any, for this is one of a new breed of Megadrive simulations which dispense with the need for zillions of different keys by utilising pull-down menus, and to great effect. With a host of different missions to attempt, either singly or as an on-going campaign, and a commanding officer who has no qualms about shooting you if the Russkies win, Abrams Battle Tank pulls no punches. The 3D is smooth and effective, although the playing area can be devoid of enemy vehicles at times. But, once in the thick of a shooting battle there'll not be much time to notice lack of tanks as most of the time will be spent trying to decimate the one or two BMP's and T-72's right in front of you and happily blasting away at your armour. If you crave for something radically different and truly lasting on the Megadrive, jump into the cockpit and drive away an M1 today!

M1 ABRAMS BATTLE TANK

Nuremberg Highway: Clear the committee all the way along the highway to reopen the supply route to a stranded allied base. Intelligence reports heavy enemy activity so pack plenty of shells.

Siegen Infestation: Seek out and destroy enemy bases using unconfirmed helicopter sightings as your only guide. Careful as you go.

Mass Destruction. Just what it says - destroy all the enemy bases in your area making sure that your buddies stay safe at home. It's tough being a lounge, eh? The Road To Bonn: Destroy the river bridge to cut off the enemy's rat run and force them to confront allied forces head on. Oh, take a few of enemy tanks out along the way.

Guess who's forgotten their toupee?

This must be the first 3D combat sim on the Megadrive - the first of many, by all accounts. If this is the shape of things to come, then I'm sure as hell looking forward to all the other Sega's little black beauties. Hendrix this type of game very well indeed - which is a shining change from all the romps we've come to know. There's plenty to do and it's the game - especially with M1 does fell down. Once you've got over the sim on the Megadrive, it'll be no real long-term chel- hettty seeking price. One of good but could have been Henover Push: Destroy the Soviet base near the city using whatever means necessary. In other words ignore the Geneva Convention completely and just blow those suckers away!

The Moselle Intercept Locale damaged allied vehicles and escort them back to base before those rotten reds turn your buddies into so much scrap metal.

When Alexey Pajitnov came up with the idea for Tetris, he wasn't just creating a game - he was changing the face of home entertainment, transforming millions of ordinary people into shape-addicted puzzle freaks!

Tetris became one of the best-known names in computing gaming, and is one reason why the Gameboy is so popular. Not content with taking over our lives with his first game, the Soviet superstar has dug out his calculator once again to produce the perplexing follow-up - Metris.

Get set for more strife in all shapes and sizes

Who says Russians are boring? Not me! First we had Tetris, the game which did more for Western-Soviet relations than the INF Treaty. Now that lovely Mr Pajitnov bursts back with Metris, which should keep the technologically advanced nations of the world quiet while Gorby mucks around with his Baltics. There's not a lot of difference between this and Alexey's earlier classic once you've stripped it to the bare bones but, like Tetris, that indescribable something which made that game stand out from the crowd flows through his latest creation. As before, graphics are functional rather than attractive and sound is of a similar, average quality - but don't be put off! If there's one title left to put the PC Engine back on the gamersplayers' map, it's Metris. This game could do for the Engine what its predecessor did for the Gameboy. Great fun!

KEEPING YOUR HEAD...

At certain points throughout the game, the player is invited to remove some hats from the playing area in exchange for a new one to play with. Not only that, but from time to time one of the falling hats is replaced with either an orange or blue flame. Orange fires clear away hats until a different type is reached, while those blue burning beauties will incinerate an entire row!

No! Not again! Just when I'd hidden my Gameboy Tetris cart and spent the rest of the week in cold turkey, the Soviets produce this and I'm hooked once again! He-tris isn't exactly a sequel to Tetris, more like a variation on the theme. Graphically it's nothing to write home about - but neither was the original. In the sound department the game is also uninspired - a jolly little tune bubbles away as you play. So what is it about He-tris that makes it so special? It's that fabulous gameplay which just blows everything else out of the water! Sorting those hats out to stay alive will soon have you hooked and you'll feel those Tetris awws coming on as that headgear just keeps on coming! What can I say? As the world waits for Super Tetris, He-tris on the Engine is more than enough to tide us over. Get ahead - get He-tris!

AT THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH!!

PSSST! Want to hear about the biggest and best computer games event in Europe? Want to play all the hottest games under one roof? Want plenty of freebies, competitions, celebrity appearances and loads of other...?

Then zoom on down to the European Computer Entertainment Show - the main event for big-time gaming!

As the world waits for the biggest show in the entire continent, here's a quick CVG sneak preview of some of the amazing things you can look forward to at this year's amazing ECES.

Held at the New Earl's Court, the show runs from September 6-8, and for your £7 entry fee (from which a donation goes to the Prince's Trust) you can look forward to so much it brings us all out in goosebumps just thinking about it.

First off, you might get on the radio or maybe even the telly! Radio One will be covering the event on the Friday morning, with DJs Jeckie Bramble and Simon Mayo waking up the nation to the sound of the show.

They'll have plenty to talk about, too. This year's show - the main event in Europe - is packed so brim full of goodies we can't mention them all, so here are just a few to whet your appetites.

The world and his uncle will be there to show you all the latest hardware and software for your machine; and allow you to play their games for nowt! Some of the goodies on show will be so brand-spanking new that even the CVG crew won't have seen them - and that's saying something!

Talking of which, come and meet the team who put together Britain's favourite games mag at the Emp Images stand, where we'll be getting up to all sorts of stunts, contests and the like. Who knows, you may even get ego on Sega's utterly incredible R-360 arcade experience!

What with a Karskoo booth, sponsored Gamemathon, pop star appearances, half-pipe skateboarding and BMX, Kick Off Challenge, sports star appearances, mime and juggling demos, games, games and more games this is going to be THE major event of the year. You'd be a right wally to miss it, so look out for next month's CVG for a full lowdown on the show to end 'em all!

RBI

BASEBALL

GAMING GOODIES UP FOR GRABS!!
COURTESY OF DOMARK

STRIKE ONE! Calling all bit hitters! Here's your chance to win big with RBI Baseball in another great CVG compo - courtesy of those fine gamesters at Domark!

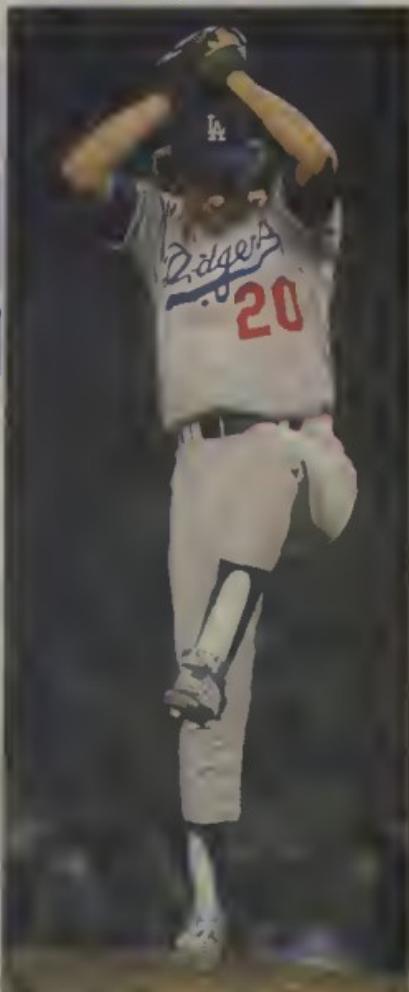

STRIKE TWO! We've got a whole bunch of baseball goodies up for grabs. The lucky winner gets to walk away with a whole boxful of RBI prizes - including a snazzy RBI Baseball jacket, genuine catcher's mitt, super-cool RBI cap, a hefty wooden baseball bat and ball!

Probably the best home computer baseball game around at the moment, RBI (which stands for Runn Battad In) puts you slap bang in the middle of the action, capturing all the excitement of the all-American sport. You can choose to bat or pitch and view the action from a variety of cameras as you square up to your opponent and try for that big home run!

So what do you have to do to be the envy of the all and aundy by scooping Domark's top prize, getting your name printed in CVG and basking in all that baseball glory? Simple. Just tell us, in no more than 20 hilarious words of wit and wisdom, why you should have the goodie. You can bag, grove, make veiled threats or try to reason with us - but the funniest entries will be the winners!

So put on your thinking cap, get scribbling and post your entry off to: I'M A BIG HITTER BECAUSE..., RBI BASEBALL COMPETITION, COMPUTER AND VIDEO GAMES, PRIORY COURT, 30-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON EC1R 3AU. Don't forget to add your name and address or we'll throw your entry straight in the bin and laugh at you for being a silly so-and-so!

Small print: Once again all the usual CVG competition rules apply, so if anyone even remotely connected with EMAP or Domark tries to enter they will be instantly disqualified, paid a visit by Paul Rand's hairdresser and thrown in the bin. The Editor's decision is final, so no bad losers, so there. Still reading? Good for you, so here's a tip: get the words RBI Baseball into your slogan and you'll have a better chance of winning. Bet you're glad you saw this!

Prehistoric! The caveman's antiquity... so they could eat horse... Unfortunately the good old legal McDonalds has seen all the changes, so you'll just have to find something else to himself and the rest of the T-Bone tribe to chew down on.

But would you credit it? At the local Kentucky Fried Prehistoric there's a closed and noboby car stands at McCloud's Mcmcburger with Cheese (those round, green things) will go to Prehistoric to eat about mountain men grub his club. Along the way you'll bump into the guru, hovering quietly above the ground, bothering nobody in particular. He's got some lovely bonus items handy, but how do you persuade him to hand them over? Easy - just bash him a few times over the bonce to receive one of the following:

ALARM: Increases time

BOMB: Knocks out all the creatures on the screen

AXE: Knocks out animals with one blow

SHIELD: Makes Prehistoric invulnerable for a short time

ANKH: Grants an extra life

HILARIOUS HISTORIC HEROICS!

So this is why Stone Age Man took so long to invent the wheel - he was far too busy mucking around in the air! Prehistorik has balloons and hanggliders positioned near to otherwise impassable areas of his world to send him soaring through the clouds and back to earth to continue his hunt!

PREHISTORK

PLUNDERING THE PREHISTORIC PANTRY

Just because all the food's been hidden in caves doesn't mean that Prehistorik isn't going to go in and nick it - 'cos he is. Things aren't going to be that simple, however, as most of the caves are guarded by fires, bats and well 'ard spiders and things!

From time to time our hero will come across huge eggs and other interesting things. Give them all a good honest bashing and see what pops out!

For some reason there's a fair bit of interest in the Stone Age lately, what with Chuck Rock and now this offering from Titus. What hits you first about Prehistorik is the graphical humour - from the squat, big-nosed hero himself to a wealth of jolly adversaries, including a stork bearing a more than passing resemblance to Big Bird from Sesame Street and a swordfish with a five o'clock shadow! Playing the game is a joy - it's tough but never really frustrating, although long-term playability may be in doubt due to the rather simple nature of the game. Sound is well done, especially the various tunes which add quite a raucous atmosphere to the proceedings. It's fast and furious and, at the end of the day, a good laugh. What you may not know is that Prehistorik was produced using the STOS game designer! Unbelievable or what? Prehistorik isn't what you'd consider an essential purchase, but you certainly wouldn't be embarrassed with this in your software collection.

PREHISTORIK

YOU'RE STUCK, OLD SON!

Every so often Prahistorik hits a big obstacle - unless, of course, you beat the living daylight out of whoever's blocking his passage (oo-arr). Each land has a guardian at the end and it's him you'll have to sort out if you're to go any further.

Prahistorik heads heavenward while the adversary plays with his nuts.

GUARDIAN ONE: It's not size that's important - honest! He may be big but this Tyrranosauras has an Achilles Heel (or should that be foot?) which will swiftly bring him down to size.

GUARDIAN TWO: No butts about it - it's going to take more than a few softly-spoken words and a sugar cube if Prahistorik is to calm down this charging Rhinoseurus.

GUARDIAN THREE: Okay, so his is bigger than yours, but it's what you do with it that counts. So use your head - or at least, use your club on the giant's head.

The first thing to strike you about Prahistorik (apart from that lethal-looking club) is the overwhelming humour in the game. The graphics are great - ranging from some horrific enemies to lovely wide-eyed little creatures so cute they vary last thing you want to do is eat them! The game also plays very well - incredible when you realise it was put together using the STOS designer and the theme tune is one of those which rattles around in your brain for absolutely ages! After a while the game can become rather repetitive - it's quite a bind having to trudge back through the screens to find food you missed first time round. That said, Prahistorik is a hoot from the first swing of the club to the last atro-ega enemy to bite the dust. If you're looking for laughs, and a fair old challenge to boot, club together some cash and shuffle on down to your nearest softshop today!

BY TOAPLAN

£31.00

So here you are, standing in the launch bay of the mothership, checking the controls of your latest top-level fighter - the Zero Wing, a real breakthrough in military technology. Designed and constructed by the finest in the field, this blasting little beauty is more than a match for the opposition.

Thank goodness for that, cos right now you find yourself slapping in the middle of war! Your former allies the CATS have done the dirty and are attacking without warning!

The sirens blare, screaming for an emergency scramble. Immediately you flick the shining switches, pull back the throttle and shoot off into the thick of the action just as a gamma missile soars into the launchbay of your mothership, blasting it to the back of beyond!

With thirty-six squadrons and a three-mile battlecruiser behind you, this was going to be a cinch. Now that you're all alone, things are going to be a bit tricky.

WHAT A LOT YOU'VE GOT!

Although you start off with a pretty crabby single shot pea shooter blowing up baddies gives access to some rather tasty add-on weapons.

The Megadrive is looking good: what with lousy platform games in the guise of the awesome Sonic The Hedgehog and now shoot 'em ups with the well-ard Zero Wing I'd not be too far off the mark to say this is probably as close a copy of R-Type as you can get on Sega's 16-bit cracker, what with the various pick-ups and shields, the naval approach to front-end, bolt-on security and the general layout of the levels which will test the most hardened blast bandit on the simplest setting. Graphically, Zero Wing cannot be faulted, from the great intro sequence to the quality and workmanship of the sprites and backdrops in the game. The programmers haven't copped out in the sound department either - catchy, raucous tunes and seat-of-the-pants SFX are the order of the day. This game is just a pleasure to play!

PAUL
RAND

A meeting with Mr Nasty!

DRONES: Put one above and one below your ship to triple your firepower and seriously Huff those bad guys. Without these little cuties you might as well wave bye-bye to life, the universe and everything!

LAS: Not the kind that doctors use to get rid of nastiness in the innards - does the same sort of thing to alien invaders, mind you. Le-hai!

GUIDED MISSILES: Just imagine the state of the enemies' trousers when they see a dozen of these babies twisting and turning their way right toward their exhaust!

ZERO WING

▶▶▶ REVIEW

SPELLO As the name suggests, this adds more "oom" to your boosters for that extra special oomph and faster acceleration all round!

Each of these weapons can be boosted by up to three times their initial strength, which should wipe the smug grins off the faces of your adversaries.

THANKS

Thanks to Console Concepts (0782 712759) for the loan of the review cartridge.

GO WILD WITH THE CATS...

Here's a quick lowdown on some of the goodies (and baddies) in store across the eight luscious levels of Zero Wing. So strap yourself in and prepare for a flight and fight to remember:

LEVEL 1: It's all systems go as all sorts of early nasties try to tell you it's time for an early bath. Just grab one of them with your on board suction gun and make that sucker pay by taking all the shools! Old ugly the end-of-level boss is fairly quickly conquered.

▲ Messing with an enemy legon,

Bio-mechanical nastiness

LEVEL 2: The squares are everywhere as you take on the CATS' secondary defence systems, trying to manoeuvre through the moving obstacles to confront a massive circular beast which spits shards missiles from its mouth!

guardian about to meet its doom!

REVIEW

ZERO WING

The Zero Wing flies for all its worth!

LEVEL 5: Fly through the wire netting to take on any thing the enemy can chuck at you, which is quite a lot actually) and watch out for the platforms on legs! Move through some R-Typeish backgrounds and blow the enemy domes back where they belong!

LEVEL 6: The CVG choice for best-level of the lot. Simply brilliant. Wait for the robots to dig tunnels through the landscape and follow them through, avoiding all those nasties hell bent on your destruction. Survive till 'ninth' and...

LEVEL 7: Recoil in horror as you witness the exploding skulls of doom! Watch out when you blow those bony baddies away because they fragment into tiny pieces of lethal shrapnel! If that's not enough, you'll then get to contend with the mother of all aliens - tentacles and everything! Get through that in one piece and...

LEVEL 8: You've reached the final challenge. Now those crazy CATS are absolutely spitting fury and we're not going to tell you anything about them except to say they're mad and bad. Survive at that and prepare yourself for a showdown with the Big Boss. Oh, be sure to pack your brown trousers.

LEVEL 3: Now the action takes place in a metallic world full of all manner of robotic rogue, including a huge end-of-level cyborg who makes the Terminator look like Basil Brush! And if robots have feelings, he's definitely in one helluva bad mood.

LEVEL 4: The shortest stage; this involves staying alive while flying around a ginormous spaceship numbered 9999. This huge horror isn't going to go down with you right...

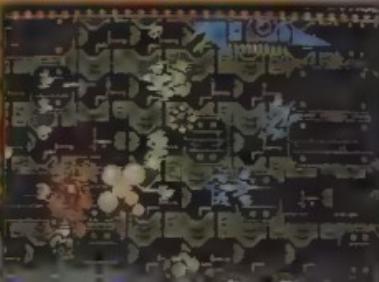

Here it is - the game which breathes new life into shoot 'em ups on the Megadrive! Just when we thought we'd blown away the last alien horror and were getting just a bit bored with the so-so sameness of it all, along comes Zero Wing to blow the boredom away! With its super-smooth gameplay, beautifully defined graphics, rocking sound track, amazing explosions and incredible end-of-level bosses, this game has the lot! I suggest you wimp out and begin playing the game on easy level - otherwise you won't see too much because those bad guys are lethal! This is an extremely addictive blaster you'll return to again and again until those uncool CATS have finally bitten the dust and you've saved the galaxy once again. Zero Wing is one of those carts which sits there just begging to be played until you finally crack and give it another go. Gimme, gimme, gimme...

TIM
BOONE

FUN WITH TRACTOR BEAMS VOL 638

Unfortunately this universe doesn't give you floating defence pods to attach to your spacecraft, unlike some we could mention. But don't despair for in Zero Wing you're equipped with a handy beam which allows you to grab hold of a bad guy and slam him onto the front of your ship!

THE NEXT MILLENIUM

It is the end of the 31st Century. Nearly one thousand years ago man colonised the moon, and from there created a range of human mutations which were left to develop other planets. At the same time, life on earth was destroyed by a cataclysmic climatic change.

Now the mutant races are at war with each other, and man has returned to Earth, rebuilt civilisation, and forgotten about past adventures.

Deep in Earth City, plans have been made to explore space again. The race has started to develop Earth's resources, to research new technology, to build for future adventures.

You must control the training, research, resources, production and stores of Earth City in a complex strategic battle to maximise the planet's supplies. You must construct and pilot the hi-tech space shuttles and ships needed for mankind to venture out into the furthest reaches of the war-torn solar system. Operation Deuteros has begun.

PIT-FIGHTER

Ari's Pit-Fighter created quite a stir when it was unleashed into UK arcades in the summer of 1990. The arcade beat 'em up scene had been pretty quiet since Capcom had released Street Fighter, but Pit-Fighter revived the public's interest with its three-player action, spectacular digitised graphics and unusual scenario.

The game itself is a no-holds-barred, bare-knuckle prize-fight staged in a seedy underground sports arena. Each player chooses one of three characters to fight as - either Buzz, a wrestler, Ty the kickboxer, or Keto, a Karate champion. The three combatants' basic skills are the same, but each has two specialist super-moves to help him out when things get rough.

And things certainly do get rough! There are a stack of savages straining at the leash to pound your face, with names such as "Angel" (the delectable female portrayed on this month's cover), "Chairman Eddie" and "Mad Mies". Every third match is a grudge match fought between the three players, and at the end of the line is the current Pit-Fighter Champion, "The Ultimate Warrior".

It's not just the other fighters who give you aggro, either. The crowd who cheer from the sidelines are, frankly, scum. They want to see some heavy-duty violence and if you decide you'd rather run away than be beaten up, they're likely to boot you back into the arena and straight into the fists of some heavily-muscled bozo!

At the end of each match, the winning fighter receives his prize in the form of a pile of cash. A knockout is rewarded with bonus cash, and if you stomped on your opponents' faces while they were down, you earn a brutality bonus!

DOMARK

HARD-HITTING GRAPHICS!

Pit-Fighter's graphics were one of the features that set it apart from other arcade fighting games. For a start, ALL the graphics are digitised, so the fighters are actually real people who have been filmed performing their different actions.

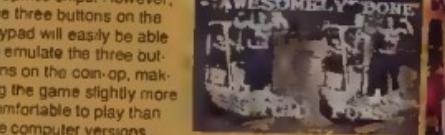

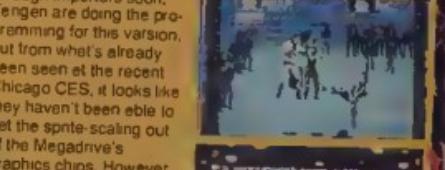

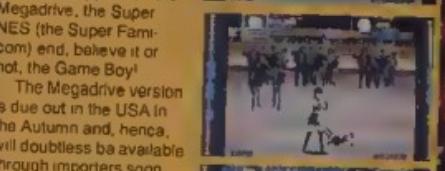

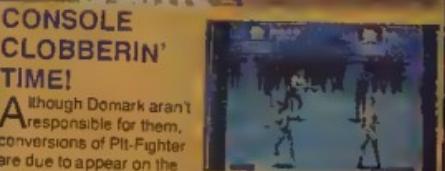

The arena is displayed in 3D, and the screen scrolls and actually zooms smoothly in and out to keep the fighters in view. The fighters can move around each other over the full area of the arena, and the sprites expand smoothly when they come to the front of the pit, and shrink when they move away.

CONVERSION KICKING!

Incredibly, Domark's conversions of Pit-Fighter manage to replicate the arcade game's powerful graphic effects very well, thanks to some pretty swish programming by the guys at Teque (who also produced Badlands for Domark). All versions (except, possibly, the C64 version) feature digitised graphics and sprite expansion, which look amazing on the Amiga as these screenshots demonstrate. PC fans are in for a treat, as Domark promise the PC version will use 256 colour VGA graphics to make the game look EXACTLY like the coin-op!

What Domark haven't been able to include is the game's three player mode, but they have managed to keep a two player mode which should be enough to satisfy most people. As in the arcade game, though, you do get the choice of three characters to fight as.

The conversions will be available on Amiga, Spectrum, Amstrad, C64 and PC in the Autumn.

Pit-Fighter should be right up the Super NES' street, because the machine's special graphics chips can make light work of recreating the game's super-smooth scrolling and sprite scaling. Toy Headquarters Inc of America have managed to program all of the coin-op (apart from the three player mode) and they reckon that it "plays just like the arcade game" (apart from the three player mode).

Toy Headquarters Inc are also programming the Game Boy version, which should be... ah... rather more challenging than programming the Super NES version. Again, THQ reckon it "plays just like the arcade game", and while sceptics may scoff, it is said that the way the Game Boy handles its screen memory makes the sprite scaling easier than you would expect. We can but wait and see.

Welcome to yet another Cheat Mode, the section that means you get the latest, greatest cheats for all formats whilst I get the lovely job of opening all your letters and absorbing all your words of wisdom. Mind you, I'd have had far less mail to sort through if you hadn't sent in all those Lemmings codes. Forty-three (count 'em) letters of codes this month, so apply your tip-dealing talents elsewhere. A hundred smackers in cold cash goes to Simon Sleight of Spalding for his toppling SWIV guide. No-one sent in any decent maps, so the maps prize remains unclaimed. If you've got any maps or (new) tips then send 'em in to me at CHEAT MODE, CVG, PRIORITY COURT, 39-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON EC1R 3AU.

CHEAT MODE

AMIGA

NARC

It's a tough life, tracking down those evil drug dealers... but not if you take advantage of this fab cheat from Brendan Glynn of Widnes, Cheshire. When the game begins, walk right until you reach the first dustbin. Kneel down and keep shooting at the bin until it turns blue. You now possess infinite lives.

ATOMIC ROBKID

If you're having a spot of bother guiding the computer gaming's cutest doshkin through his quest, try this from Kit Wah Wong of Leeds.

On the title screen type TUESDAY 14TH and a whole load of Robkids are yours for the wasting.

PANG

Brendan Glynn again, this time with a brilliant tip for this crazy ball-lobbing coin-op conversion. On the Map screen, type in WHAT A NICE CHEAT. The map turns purple, allowing you to select any level.

GOLDEN AXE

Here's a jolly tip from Andrew Turner and Matthew Coventry, who not only enjoys sorting out hordes of enemies but also goes searching for them too! When you spot any flashing GO sign, stay exactly where you are. After several seconds, up from the ground rise black skeletons which you can hack and slash for extra points.

SHADOW OF THE BEAST 2

It's time having only the one life in this graphic spectacular from Psygnosis, especially when you consider the amount of enemies simply itching to steal it from you. Andrew Seeley of Nuneaton has come to the rescue with a simple little cheat to combat the problem.

From the start, run right toward the dwarves in the wood. Position yourself so that the first dwarf speaks to you but doesn't start hurling spears. Press A to ask a question then type TEN PINTS and hit RETURN. You are now impervious to enemy attack, although you will have to restart the game should get stuck in the waterfall rocks, etc.

TEENAGE MUTANT HERO TURTLES

The first film is out on video, the sequel's at the flicks soon, and you can whet your appetite for its arrival with this tip from James Ardd from W Midlands.

When asked for the security code, type in 8850 and then 1506 before entering the correct code, then type HELP to receive infinite turtles.

TOTAL RECALL

He'll be back - and he is, too. Paul Jolly, that is, with tips for the latest Arnie extravaganza. Type LISTEN TO THE WHALES on the title screen with Arnie's face on it. The screen will flip and you will be immortal for the first level.

At the start of level two type JIMMI HENDRIX (if this doesn't work try JIMMY HENDRICK). Do the same on level five.

TURRICAN 2

What better than a useful little cheat to go with this HIT sequel to the fab Turrican. Thanks to Paul Jolly from Newbury for this one: Press SPACE on the title screen to enter the sound test screen. Now press 1, then 4, followed by 2, then ESC twice. The game begins with infinite lives and power lines.

SLY SPY

Warren Lee of Seven Oaks has sent in this great tip for Ocean's James Bond-inspired hero. Type in 007 as your code and on the scoreboard enter your name as SHAKEN NOT STIRRED for infinite lives.

CORE

00000000

JAMES POND

Another secret agent, another cheat, this time from Adam Southern of Croydon Green. To take the aquatic adventurer to the sixth level, fire off the lobsters; of level one then go to the pipe which you emerge from at the start - a little to the left of this pipe is a secret warp to level six.

CHUCK ROCK

How would you like to advance a level or two in this brilliant up 'em up? Well, take heed to what Barnsley's Allan Smith has to tell you.

On the title screen type TURN FRAME and press 1 to 5 to select a level. Alternatively, type in MORTIMER and F1 to F6 to pick a zone.

BOMBER

It's unusual to see cheat codes for flight sims, but Chris McLean from Palmwoods in Walsall's Melinda Land has persevered and come up with the cracker.

On the high score table enter your name as KYLIE (with a space before the K) in order to access any mission.

SWIV

This well 'ard shoot 'em up has been played to death by Robert Pogmore of Biggleswade. So much so that he's even discovered the following handy hints to make alien devastation that much simpler.

When the game starts pause the game by pressing H, then press the CTRL button. Unpause and continue the game with infinite lives.

RUFF 'N' REDDY

The cartoon's atrocious, but the game isn't too bad at all. Now it's made even better (and somewhat simpler) with the help of this little cheat from Chris Griffiths from Southall in Middlesex. Just enter EVIL NEVER DIES on the title screen for less of a Ruff time on the lifeometer.

SPACE ADVENTURE

CREATURES

Didn't Frank Sinatra sing a song about this? "Creatures in the night, exchanging glances." Maybe not. Anyway, Lee Dowell from Leicester aims to educate us in the art of creature cracking with the following tip.

Once the game has loaded, wait for the title track to end and the Clydes to stop dancing. Then put your joystick in port one and waggle it like crazy. The Clydes should do a frantic dance and eventually turn grey. Put your joystick back into port two and get ready to start the game with infinite lives!

MEGADRIVE

GHOULS 'N' GHOSTS

A real toughie, this one, but thankfully made a touch simpler by none other than Walsh wonder Adam Cooper. To get rid of collision detection press the A button six times then push UP, DOWN, LEFT and RIGHT. Finally, press B and START together three times to turn those G and Gs into shadows of their former selves.

MIDNIGHT RESISTANCE

Andrew Harker of Blackburn has sent in this rather neat cheat for this not inexpensive blast 'em up. On the title screen, hold down A, B and C on the control pad and press START at the same time. When the game begins simply pause and press button A to skip levels!

SUPER MONACO G.P.

Hard to understand why anyone would want to be on Madonna's team (what with all that frenetic dancing, and the multitude of photographers hanging around all the time). Still, Norfolk's own Jamie Bennett has sent in the codes to make you part of the gang (pointy brassiere not included).

REVENGE OF SHINOBI

Finding your life counter rapidly depleting? Not any more. Use this tip courtesy of Martin Colwell. When you've reached Round 4 and you're at the Motor Mill, jump and somersault, throwing shurikens as you go, onto the first conveyor. Once you are on the conveyor look behind you to find an extra life box just below. Drop down to collect not one but two extra lives. Do this repeatedly to continuously stock up on extra Ninjas!

MICKEY MOUSE

A short and sweet cheat from a short and sweet chap. Kevin Merrett, to be precise, who hails from Mitcham in Surrey. When the level completed screen appears and you're shown the bonus scores, press the START button rapidly and you should hear a tone telling you that the next level begins with an extra life in your possession.

NINTENDO

SOLAR JETMAN

Here is a very handy list of hints on where and how to find the various warps and bonus games, all courtesy of Tom Mayne of Stockport, who knows his way around the game. Take it away, Tom!

PLANET ONE

The bonus game can be reached from the mothership as follows: fly left from the ship until you get to the cave wall. Follow it up until you see a moving blue warp - quickly bang into it and voila! Collect the diamonds but avoid the rocks as they knock you off course.

PLANET THREE

Tricky to find the warp zone every time, but go down the first hole on the right and make your way along the very thin passageway but don't go through it. Instead, fly into the centre of the circle of guns and try to get shot. If you are hit at the right area inside (he is a role you enter the warp zone which allows you to jump to either planet 5, 6 or 7 (make sure shields are off before you warp).

PLANET FIVE

From the mothership go down the second hole and follow it down. Looking at the map (which you should have purchased by now) it splits into two caves, the left one going down while the right ends in a dead-end. Take the right cave and follow the top wall to find the bonus game warp. Thereby is to avoid the rocks and mines whilst collecting diamonds.

PLANET EIGHT

From the mothership go to the top of the screen then right until you reach the blue warp to planet thirteen. Not only is there the warp on this level, but if you go left down the hole and right through three of the narrow corridors, then up to the dead end you'll find some fuel and a large alien thing flames at you, with a small alien running around him. If you manage to shoot the big, baddy without hitting the little chap, he will follow you around, blasting at you and off-screen enemies!

PLANET NINE

From the mothership go to the top of the screen and go right as in planet eight. Stay at the top of the screen to find the bonus warp, and watch out for the mines!

STREET ROD

Antipodean antics with David Zielzne and Karl Anderson, two fellas from Victoria, Australia who say that this bonzer offering isn't just a game, more's a way of life. Hmmm. Anyway, on with the tip.

Buy the 1949 Chevrolet 2dr Styline at $475.00. Take out the engine and transmission and sell the body for up to $30,000.00. An easy way to get loadsadollars, but don't get too greedy as you'll end up with minus money!

PRINCE OF PERSIA

PRINCE OF PERSIA

A truly international PC tips section this month, with a cheat from Cien Cook from Natal in South Africa for Broderbund's graphic spectacular which, as it happens (Jimmy Savile Impersonations Inc) is quite a jolly little number, too. Load the game by typing PRINCE MEGAHIT. You will then find that once the game has loaded, pressing the following keys have the corresponding effects:

SHIFT-L SKIPS TO NEXT LEVEL
SHIFT-W ALLOWS YOU TO FLOAT DOWNTOWARDS SHIFT-I INVERTS THE SCREEN
SHIFT-T EXTRA ENERGY
SHIFT-B TURNS OFF THE LIGHTS
SHIFT-C GIVES A STRANGE MESSAGE

And back to dear old Brimy with another levels hack for the same game, sent in by Kent person Matthew Owen. With SHIFT depressed type END OF L to skip levels up to level four. Using this cheat, you do not now need to collect the sword.

PC ENGINE

SPLATTERHOUSE

PC Engineers! Stop that whining about never getting any coverage and get stuck into this top-hole tip from John Cottam of Preston, Lancs.

To up the difficulty of this superb conversion, on starting the game hold down RUN and SELECT to rever back to the title screen. After a few seconds the word HARD appears and you can restart the game with con-op difficulty! Wow!

DEVIL CRASH

The game which gets the vote for best PC Engine game in the office receives a tatty password from South East London's very own Steve Scott.

Type in ABBBBBBBBB to start the game with sixteen balls and 111,848,100. Also, if you can put your first ball into the girl's head without touching the three balls above it, you will score a bonus of 1,000,000!

AMSTRAD

HONG KONG PHOOEY

He's a number one super guy! He's also got a great cheat now, thanks to Colin Lowe who inhabits Sale, Cheshire. Just type THUGI on the options table to receive infinite energy!

GAME BOY

PIPE DREAM

Now you don't need to own the Tetris cart to play this, possibly the finest Gameboy game ever! Just plug in your Pipe Dream cartridge and take heed of the advice passed on by Masaki Hata of Finchley, London E8. On the password screen, enter Pipe to access Tetris mode (So where is my Pipe Dream cart? Lost again! Can somebody test this out and write in if it works? - Ed)

GHOSTBUSTERS

Not so much a cheat mode, but entry into the sound test screen. Pay homage to Masaki Hata for this one. When your game has ended and you are asked whether or not you wish to continue, choose end and then hold down SELECT and button B at the same time to unlock the secret of the sound test!

CONTRA

Masaki Hata again. Sound test again. Gameboy again. Does the man ever stop? We think not. Take it away, Masaki! On the title screen, push UP, DOWN, LEFT, RIGHT and START to hear all those cheeky sounds and jingles.

TEENAGE MUTANT HERO TURTLES

Should you find yourself rapidly running out of pizza power in the great game featuring the heroes in a half-shell, just take a butchers on this cheeky cheat from an equally cheeky chappie, Daniel Barry from Surrey. During the game, press the pause button and push UP, DOWN, LEFT, RIGHT, A and B and watch that energy bar leap up! Cowabunga!

GAME GEAR

COLUMNS

Should you be having difficulty completing this fine Tetris derivative our own Vail to see the different endings, look no further than the hint item 'The Shum of Gosport'.

Go to the flash mode and select a height of nine. Now pick a difficulty level (easy, normal or hard). Next, purposely end the game and when the flash demo breaks the block, it will display a different ending depending on the difficulty level which you previously selected. Hoorah!

HIGH SCORES

Dear Wimps,

Summer rolls in, and with it comes the selection of high scores. I hope for your sake you lot aren't going to holiday and slack off again. If you think your talents deserve a mention in the hottest table around then fill out the coupon - or crawl away and hide in a dark corner like the loser you are!

Sadie

AMIGA

Can you believe it? An utterly stupendous score on the wicked Blimp Bros kick 'n' ecos 'em up, even though it's against a fairly weak side. How about some scores against the top teams in the Speedball 2 league? I'm waiting!

SPEEDBALL 2 424-0 (against Raw Messiahs)

Grant Edwids, Swansea

BRAT

Nicholas Hall, Stowbridge, Worcs

TURRICAN II

Stuart Thomas, Tamworth, Staffs

SWIV

Vincent Tyboul, Netherlands

GODS

Mark Pepper, Woodbridge, Suffolk

AMSTRAD

A pathetic number of scores for the Amstrad this month. What I want to see, quite apart from a damn sight more entries from you miserable lot, are scores for some more up-to-date games... unless you're all a bunch of miserable old women who can't play anything other than age-old software. Well, can you?!

SHADOW WARRIORS

Samuel Martin, Brentwood, Essex

FLIMBO'S QUEST

Carl Sury, Barnet, Herts

TURBO OUTRUN

ARCADES

Only Rignall's Pitfighter score survives the wrath of the CVG readers, and even that is being hotly contested. Someone matches the previous Streetfighter 2 record, and there's a couple of new offerings to aim for. So get aiming, NOW!

EURO FOOTBALL CHAMP

Merlin Ng, Hemilton, Lancashire

MOONWALKER	LAST LEVEL, ONE CREDIT

PIT-FIGHTER	3,901,900
Julien Rignall, CVG
RACE DRIVIN'	82,110
Matthew Randell, Hounslow, Middx

C64

What is lacking in quantity is certainly made up for in quality this month, especially the ultra-high Ghouls and Ghosts and Turrican 2 scores. Can anyone do any better than these two? Get cracking, creeps!

CREATURES	5,571
Lee Gowell, Leicester
NARC	4,763,802

SHADOW WARRIORS	398,200
Nicholas Aahdown, Bath, Avon
TURRICAN II	4,620,900
Paul Denning, Dartmouth, S Devon

GAME BOY

Yet again, pinball is the flavour of the month, with more scores arriving for Revenge of the Gator than for any other Gameboy cart. Spidex comes a close second, however, with some pretty nifty scores for the webbed wonder, followed within a whisker by a veritable clutch of scoring superstars on the superb R-Type.

MEGADRIVE

Cor blimey! Someone's trounced the previous John Madden's score - and how! Speaking of big boys, how about the Mickey Mouse and Gynog entries? Some very pleasing scorelines this month, and the promise of yet more to push the Megadrive up there on the gamersplayers' podium.

NINTENDO

It's true, the saying which goes 'If you don't ask, you don't get'. No sooner do I mention Snake, Rattle and Roll than the scores coming tumbling in. On top of that, most of you have been frantically attempting to beat the previous scores, with a few respectable showings, too.

Sheesh! Last month you pulled your fingers out and sent in some respectable scores. This month, fingers are firmly plugged back into whichever vita entrances you care to insert them. This is frankly not good enough, and if you want any fingers left, I'd do something about it if I were you.

SUPER FAMICOM

Not a lot in the way of mindblowing scores this month, although some clever fellow has found the cheat to equal the evil Rignaff's Super Mario score. Other than that, it seems that most of you have been sitting on your hands for the past few weeks - get them back onto the joypads and get playing; I want scores lit for real heroes next month!

ACTRAISER	11,830
Dan Osborne, Hornsea, E Yorks
FINAL FIGHT	3,829,353
Roger Adams, Wolverhampton, Staffs

Right, wimpos, you know the drill - every month CVG will be throwing down the gauntlet to all of you weaklings. Fill out the form below and send it to SCORE WITH SADIE at the usual CVG address. If your scores are good enough, they'll be printed in my Highscore Tables, and outstanding scorers may be called on to go up against the drooling CVG reviewers and a software house champion, with an expensive piece of computer or console gear (depending on what you already own) as a prize!

SEGA

For the biggest-selling console in the country, there's a conspicuous lack of high-scores for the good old Master System this time around. What about the likes of Aerial Assault? There are loads of great games out there for your machine - get out and play them and send me the scores if you value your family jewels...

AMIGA

BYTESIZE

Amiga owners are in for a classic treat this month, with a slice of gaming history now available at the magic budget price. Robert Swan steers his well-trained joystick through all those wonderful cheap and cheerful goodies!

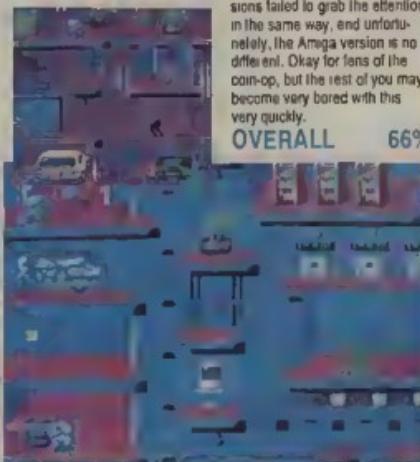

IMPOSSIBLE MISSION II

KIXX

£7.99

Any gameplayer out there who hasn't played IM, hang your head in shame! This absolutely stunning piece of software first hit town about three years ago and became an instant classic - brilliant graphics and sound, oh-so-addictive gameplay and action that grabbed you by the throat and refused to let go. Now that it's available for eight savs, you'd be completely off your trolley to miss it. Buy this now or phone the nuthouse for an appointment...

SHARKEY'S MOLL

ZEPPELIN 16-BIT

£6.99

This Op Wolf clone puts you in the (gum)shoes of a 1920s copper, out to rescue his girl and shut down the bad guys. To be perfectly frank, why anyone would bother is beyond us. Naff audiovisuals and boring, frustrating gameplay is enough to drive anyone bonkers, so give this a miss.

BIONIC COMMANDO

KIXX

£7.99

Bleeeugh! What a pile of old trash this is - poorly drawn sprites sliding around a really jerky screen, absolutely miles away from the excellent arcade machine. Even ardent fans of the com-op would be disappointed with this cruddy ST port over, so leave it well alone (unless you're three bits short of a six-pack).

LED STORM

KIXX

£7.99

This aged Capcom overhead future racer was okay as a com-op, but the home computer versions failed to grab the attention in the same way, and unfortunately, the Amiga version is no different. Okay for fans of the com-op, but the rest of you may become very bored with this very quickly.

...NEWS FLASH...

...Blasting onto an Amiga near you soon is an updated version of that classic Thalamus C64 blaster, Armalyte. Now entitled Armalyte - The Final Run, the idea remains the same - simply blast seven shades out of anything that moves! This enhanced version is currently under the wings of Arc Developments (hey of Forgotten Worlds, Clickdown and R-Type II fame), and from what we've seen it looks like a real bantster. Keep your eyes peeled and twenty-six scvs handy.

...Cinemaware may be shutting up shop, but two of their planned titles are still to grace the Amiga. Rollerballas is a mixture of roller derby, boxing, wrestling, skateboarding and hockey - sounds Weird City if you ask us. The other is TV Sports Baseball, featuring a complete 162 game season, 25 man rosters, 5 man reserve lists, 26 teams of all time great players and all the other usual odds and sods associated with the TV Sports series. Both of these will splash down during the summer, so watch the skies .

...Speaking of Cinemaware, TV Sports Football should be out and about on the Mirror Image budget label as you read this, for the meagre sum of £9.99.

...Those amazing Turtles show no sign of laying down and giving up the ghost - Turtles 2 (a conversion of the bnl Konami com-op) has been signed up by Microsoft. Probe will once more be doing the job - and I just hope the Amiga version is a heck of a lot better than the original...

Something a touch different on the ST scene this time round, as would-be game designer Robert Swan takes a look at Domark's virtual reality creator, intent on finding if you really can enter a world of your own...

GALDRAGON'S DOMAIN

PLAYERS

This adventure with 3D graphics looked as though it could be the next Dungeon Master when it was first released in 1989. However, it wasn't to be, and while the pictures are nice, the plot and gameplay are confined and more or less exciting. Galdregon's Domain isn't a terrible purchase at this price, but there are better budget adventures around. Try the Zork games or Bard's Tale instead.

3D CONSTRUCTION KIT

DOMARK

£39.99

Ever fancied creating your own 3D game? Well here's your chance with this construction system from the creators of such titles as Castle Master and Toilet Eclipse. So, what do you get for your shekels? Well, the package contains a small but detailed manual, a single disk containing the kit itself, and an excellent tutorial video, which explains the uses and functions of the kit, as well as showing what the system is capable of!

Initially, the kit is rather tough to get to grips with, but the simple menus make life a touch easier, and once you get the hang of constructing polygons, grouping them together to create solid shapes, and then manipulating those shapes to build complete objects, things come together nicely. If you have the inclination, you can build complete worlds with buildings that have fully-furnished interiors, vehicles (or anything you want, come to think of it), and then view these from any possible angle.

As far as the game-creating element is concerned, a small amount of "programming" is required, but the commands used are all explained in detail in the manual. As far as control panels are concerned, several are included with the package, but the artists amongst you can design your own using Deluxe Paint ST, OEGAS Elite or Neochrome.

Overall, this is an excellent utility which will give would-be game designers a chance to show what they're made of, as well as a useful (?) system for Mum and Dad if they want to redesign the living room (?!) Although it's all very costly (£99.99 is a trifling steep), 3D Construction Kit is a professional product that will appeal to anyone with an urge to create their own little world.

...NEWS FLASH...

...Arc Developments (programmers of the Forgotten Worlds and Crackdown conversions) are putting the finishing touches to ST Armalyte for Thalamus. The game originally appeared on the C64 three years and its fabulous graphics and super-hot space-blasty gameplay earned it much acclaim. From what we've seen of the 16-bit versions they could well achieve the same kind of success! The ST conversion should be on the shelves as you read this, priced at £25.99.

Next on Virgin's release schedule of budget Infocom adventures are the epic wizardry yarn, Sorceror, and the very interesting Deadline, a great detective story which casts the player as (not surprisingly) a detective on a murder case. Both should be out as you read this, priced at a very reasonable £9.99.

...Gremlin will soon be releasing the first in their series of Hero Quest data disks. Return of the Witchlord comprises ten extra quests to be loaded into the original game, and the disk will be out in August, priced at £12.99.

MULTIMIXX 2

KIXX

Here's not one, not two, but three blasts from the past, all in one bountiful budget package! Beach Head is set during the Pacific War and played over six levels, the aim of the game is to invade an enemy island in order to knock out a major command post. Beach Head II follows on a few years from the original. The task is now to battle through four combat sequences in order to rescue prisoners-of-war. Raid puts you in the cockpit of a superfighter out to knock out the USSR's nuclear weapons currently screaming towards the US. All three titles are showing their age in terms of graphic finesse, but in terms of playability all three are as refreshing and entertaining as they were when first released and well worth the five asking price. Both nostalgia buffs and blasting freaks would do well to grab this at once.

Set over twelve levels, this Thalamus re-release pits a lone cyborg warrior against hordes of malevolent invaders, all intent on destruction on a mass scale. Experienced blastaholics should glean some entertainment here.

...NEWS FLASH...

Coming soon - the C64 conversion of Sega's Bonanza Bros co-op! Although the Mega-drive version reviewed last issue was a tad lacking, here's hoping that this version (courtesy of megasoftco US Gold) is just as much of a hood as the co-op... Also from USG is the C64 version of the Capcom co-op MERCs. Everything looks rather nice at the moment, but how this stands up to the cracking Amiga blast is yet to be seen... Fancy building your own world? Well, if you've browsed through the ST Bytesize, you'll no doubt have come across the 3D Construction Kit, which allows you to do that very thing. C64 owners are by no means left out, as this system will be appearing soon on your machine for the grand total of twenty-five roles...

GALDRAGONS DOMAIN

Similar in style to Dungeon Master, this poor effort at taking that crown is audio-visually okay, but is so slow and boring that even the most ardent of role-players will give up at the first hurdle. Any C64 owner wanting a bit of RPG action would do better to look at Mirrorsoft's Bloodwyrm instead - it's a heck of a lot more entertaining.

GAME BOY

More hand-held hilarity this month, as Rob Swentakes a look at the latest bundle of Game Boy releases, including an import coin-op conversion, the sequel to A Boy and His Blob and a conversion of an old Hewson wonder...

SNOW BROS JR

£19.99

A conversion of the entertaining Toaplan coin-op, Snow Bros Jr puts you in the (snow)shoes of a snowman whose task in life is to do battle with numerous nasties over 40 platform-strewn levels. Although the coin-op's two player mode is missing, this is still a good laugh, and although not yet officially available, well worth grabbing hold of. Pick it up, and have a (snow)ball.

TRIFFIX

£19.99

Hands up, who remembers Hewson's classic Nebulus? Well, now this lower-lopping rip's available on the Game Boy, and dashed good it is, too. Your task sounds easy enough - simply make it to the top of each lower before the timer runs out - but numerous nefarious nasties lurk in your way, eager to put you out of their misery! Overall, a enjoyable slice of gaming history and well worth checking out.

NOBUNAGA'S AMBITION

KOEI

£19.99

A bit of an odd fish, this - set in feudal Japan, you must defeat other warlords in order to seize control of the country. In order to achieve this, however, you have to manage not only the people, but lay down all manner of policies in order to gain allies, harvest crops, and build your troops for war. All together, a bit of a brain-strainer, and definitely one for the strategists amongst you. Definitely worth a look.

RESCUE OF PRINCESS BLOBETTE

ABSOLUTE

£19.99

A Boy and his Blob on the NES featured the adventures of a human boy and a small blob which changed shape when fed jellybeans (!). This Game Boy sequel again features the two mismatched heroes, and is as full of puzzles as the original, as well as being addictive and fun to boot. If you're bored of the same old thing, have a gander, but be prepared to spend a long time playing!

...NEWS FLASH...

...Coming soon to a Game Boy near you - a conversion of that old Data East classic, Burger Time Deluxe. Taking control of a manic burger chef, you've got to build the burgers whilst avoiding the clutches of food fiends Mr Egg, Mr Pickle, and Mr Wiener (that's a sausage to you lot). It all looks like a lotta laffs, but how the finished product plays remains to be seen...

...Check this out for a list of releases to hit the Game Boy within the near future (deep breath): RoboCop II, Star Trek, Mr Dol, Super Hunchback, Ninja Gaiden, Asteroids, Missile Command, Paperboy II, Gauntlet II, and Marble Madness. Phew! Jaz has already played Mr Dol (the lucky so-and-so), and he reckons it's absolutely brilliant.

AMIGA
BY ACTIVISION

£25.99

Only a very strong argument another galaxy could fail to move in between Phage, the spin-off which effectively changed the face of space combat. Here began some wonderful stuff - we take it forward today: the horizontal scroll, the multi-levels and that sense of the big blast at the end of a level. It's all there, along with some seriously good-looking graphics. Normally picky gamers would claim up to 80% of the merits go to the machine. And when you have to play the game, though, the quality really could not be denied. The graphics, sound, playability and addictive nature of R-Type had it all.

As add-ons came in thick and fast, and they go from every single coin you can, which lumped on the lack of R-Type's subtlety, many were produced. Raver and - series, clones, derivatives and downright copies. Only a few of them had the original's quality. None bettered it.

Then came the arcade release of the second R-Type, a lively and R-Type II. The play was no different, but of the trusty R9 against its full forces of the galactic Empire, spanning six levels of progressively more difficult shoot 'em up action, collecting new, more devastating weaponry along the way. The sequel matched the quality of its daddy, and all the addictive qualities of the first. Activision had made the leap over to the follow-up, R-Type II was a success. So how would Activision's computer conversions measure up?

WHAT DO PODS MAKE? PRIZES!

If you wanna get ahead, get some power-ups for Broo Bonus blasting! At first you'll wonder why there are so many different types of add-on weapon - but later levels will reveal their individual importance.

NOSE CONE: The pod you'll find most useful over any other. It can't be destroyed and can trash most enemies just by smashing into them. If that's not enough, it can be bolted to the front or back of the R9!

LASERS: Collect this pod and watch with glee as those little blue beams literally tear any oncoming invaders apart.

MISSILES: Not for you those point-in-the-air things that the rest of the cosmos has to put up with. These babies home in on the nearest baddy and pummel them out of commission.

DEFENCE PODS: A boon in general ship defence. These spherical gizmos hover above and below your craft, giving much-needed protection to the most vulnerable parts of your frame.

BOMBS: These are a new item which didn't make an appearance in the first R-Type game, but they really make a difference when they're added to your arsenal.

ARC OF DEATH: An elliptical laser charge which spells hard luck for anything caught in its wake.

PHOTON TORPEDOS: Don't worry if there's an enemy in a hard-to-reach part of the screen - just let fly with this piece of kit and if it travel along the ground, right toward that alien troublemaker.

R-TYPE II

FIGHTING ON THE LEVELS...

R-Type II features six levels of blasting action. Here's a quick rundown on the worlds to conquer.

LEVEL ONE: Space. The final frontier. These are the voyages of the R-B. Its mission - to blast hell out of the minions of the Bydo Empire.

First we had R-Type, the most influential shoot 'em up ever. It must have been almost every other blaster since has copied it in some form or other. Now we're treated to the official follow-up, which we raved about in its compo incarnation a year and a half ago. Is the conversion any good? Well, as you can see from the screenshots, the Amiga has reproduced the graphics almost to a tee, from the imaginative spritework to the finely detailed backdrops. The synthesised sound effects are a different story, though, and they're likely to grate after a short while. R-Type II is also very sluggish, both in the speed of the horizontal scroll and the relative unresponsiveness of the controls. Things get better once a couple of speed-ups have been collected, but collide with an enemy or be destroyed by a bullet and it's back to fighting with the joystick to get the R-9 to move an inch. This may sound as if I wasn't impressed - not true. R-Type II is a challenging shoot 'em up with a variety of aliens and well-balanced difficulty setting. As it stands the game is very good, but not the conversion it could have been.

R-TYPE II

LEVEL TWO: This time round your spacecraft doubles as a handy submarine so swoop underwater and take out those devilish drones.

...an underwater boss!

LEVEL FOUR: Into the fortress, and into a whole heap of trouble. The Bydo Empire are on full alert and don't want to be caught out this time.

LEVEL FIVE: The defences are all but breached, yet there's still a bit further to go until you reach the nerve centre of the Bydo Empire.

Beat this guy and you've won

▲ This giant ship is level three

LEVEL THREE: Swooping over the planet surface watch out for the Tadpoles of Doom - launched en masse from the battlecruisers!

R-Type and its equal rank among the greatest silver-guzzling coin-ops of all time, which makes this one of the strongest licenses of the lot. Whilst this is a competent enough conversion and a very good game in its own right, it just doesn't quite retain the feel and atmosphere of its arcade daddy. The graphics and sound are a fine reconstruction of the original masterpiece, but let's face facts: the gameplay is a tad slow. This problem improves once you collect a couple of upgrades, but even then it just doesn't flow in the way we've come to expect. On any original sideways scrolling blaster this would not really be a problem, but with R-Type II you need that extra zip so brilliantly delivered by the original game. This could have been a cracking conversion and earned its rightful place in the home computer hall of fame, but it falls slightly short of the mark and now ranks among the also-rans of its, err, type. Sorry fans, but the wait for that elusive all-time R-Type classic clone goes on.

MEGADRIVE

£31.00

BY TAITO

OK guys, listen up. We're talking serious trouble here, so get that bubble gum out of your mouths and pay attention. The enemy are all over the skies and we've lost everything unless some of our brave boys can send those bogies down in flames and kick their butts back to wherever the hell they came from!

Lucky for us we're Americans and we're flying Mustangs - so there ain't much can touch us when it comes to sheer blasting power. Saddle up and take out these painful planes. Who knows, there may even be a few medals to throw around afterwards.

By the way, watch out for those big mothers at the end of each level. These babies are big-time and you'll need some serious courage to shoot 'em from the skies before you can call mom and tell her you're a hero..

KNOW YOUR ENEMY!

Naaaaaaow! Raaaaatataat! Boom! Sound familiar? It is! Fire Mustang is a bog standard horizontal shoot 'em up across the skies in a wide variety of pseudo-warlike battlefields. Looking somewhat similar to P47 Thunderbolt, your job is to shoot down as many of the enemy as possible before squeezing up to the end-of-level superplane in a do-or-die duel to the death. During the game you'll get to take on all manner of German and Japanese planes through the clouds across the world. Enemy fighters range from whiffy little Messerschmidts and Zero fighters through to lippin' huge bombers requiring some hefty bomb bay blarney to blow them from the air! Also, keep your eyes open for the little helicopter which spins across the sky fairly harmlessly until you blow it to bits. Yes, we know they weren't invented then!

It's amazing the variation in quality to be found amongst Megadrive software in one month. We've got possibly the finest game available for the machine in Sonic The Hedgehog and, with Fire Mustang, the worst game you could imagine. It's a shoot 'em up so breathtakingly average, were it a person people would forget to invite to parties. The graphics reatly are bad - on level two, for instance, these green things can be seen jutting out of the ocean - and what they're meant to be God only knows. Coupla the indistinct backdrops with that, uninspiring, flickering sprites and you're left with a weak shell of a game.

Gameplay is about as simple as holding down the fire buttons and moving up and down, as enemy fire moves so slowly one could go away and make a cup of tea before coming back and dodging the bullet. Got the message yet? Let me spell it out - steer clear.

FIRE MU

► REVIEW

GUNNING FOR GLORY...

Taking on the German and Japanese air forces single-handed is a bit of a tall order, even for the best fighter jockey the Americans can muster!

Ovnumbered a squillion to one, chances are you're going to end up as bits of history unless you've got that firepower edge over your adversaries.

Luckily your Mustang is equipped with a fairly nifty machine gun, which can be boosted by pick-ups along the way. These also provide bombs and speedups to make your plane that little bit better. In addition, you have a super smart bomb which wrecks everything in its path at the push of a button! Crikey, is that one helluva secret weapon or what?

A historic fly-by as the remainder of Iraq's nuclear arsenal explodes beneath the Mustang.

◀ Either he's been blessed, or he's been eating baked beans and soap powder!

▲ Two down and five to go as our mischievous mafai marvel takes on the big 'one.

This programmer explodes as he realises he's included hi-tech Cruise missiles in a WW2 game.

This has gotta be one of the worst games to bring up a Megadrive in the short history of the machine. Manufactured Taito seem to be giving this car quite a push in Japan, but why they bothered to bring it out in the first place I just don't know. There's nothing here we haven't seen a hundred times before, done a hundred times better. With so-so graphics (apart from the static World War II shots, which are quite good) abysmal sound and gameplay so mind-numbingly awful that I'd bloodywink if you shoot this piece of drivel down the second you step away on the fleshy cover and award yourself a medal for saving some hard-earned cash. This Mustang is crap to the max, so wipe that silly grin off your face and completely forget about this game - NOW!

Yet again, the Codemasters run riot over the rest of the Amstrad chart, what with Dizzy and various Quattro titles... Is there any hope left for full price titles? Speaking of which, the only one there is the Turtles (green)...

CVG TIP FOR THE TOP

Although not wanting to sound too repetitive, the distinct feeling is that yet another budget title will sit at the top of the stack next month - don't you lot like spending money or something?

Lombard RAC screeches into pole position this month, with the brilliant Xenon 2 close behind - don't you get the feeling they should be the other way round? Also, GDD5 gets a look in, at last.

CVG TIP FOR THE TOP

We reckon Xenon 2's good enough for the top slot, but expect GDD5 to start climbing the ladder.

AMIGA

£25.99

BY KRYASIS

I took English football just one season to go from Europe's reviled to revered, thanks to Manchester United's astounding Cup Winners' Cup victory against Spanish giants Barcelona earlier this year. Alex Ferguson's men took on the might of some of the best sides in the world (and even little Wrexham) to take the title at the first attempt after five years in the international wilderness following the Heysel Stadium disaster. This game, the sequel to the 100,000-plus selling (and 95% CGV HIT rated) Manchester United, is a celebration of the club's achievements.

The object of the game, as you'd expect, is to take the Reds to the top in the five available competitions - UEFA Cup, European Cup, Cup Winners' Cup, Super Cup or World Club Championship. All of the teams which qualified for the respective competitions are featured and there are league and friendly games to play when there is no cup fixture planned. Most of the cup games are played over two legs, the winner being the team with the higher aggregate score.

A fine save from the lad, eh Grealish?

When Kryasis said they were going to produce a sequel to Manchester United containing some of the best bits not featured in the original, they weren't kidding! Manchester Utd Europa is here, and it's a very good simulation of football. The first thing that strikes is the quality of the graphics - all the players have the appropriate numbers on their backs - a great touch - and the amount of different moves they can achieve is, as a famous sporting quizmaster might say, quite remarkable. Not only can the players run about and kick the ball, they can chest it down, head it, launch frightening volleys. In fact, almost everything a real tooty player can do! The aftertouch works well, allowing for goals aplenty if you know how to use it to beat effect. There are a couple of gripes with Manchester Utd Europa, mind you. For one, I wish Kryasis had taken a leaf out of Kick Off's book and introduced a free-rolling ball instead of a stick-to-your-foot special. It would have made for a far more realistic game. Still, we can't have everything and as it stands Manchester Utd Europa is an enjoyable version of the game we love so much.

MANCHESTER UNITED EUROPE

AFTER TOUCH OF CLASS

One of the features of Manchester Utd Europa should be familiar to fans of Kick Off 2 - the facility to use aftertouch. For those not aware of what aftertouch is (where have you been?), it's a method of moving the joystick directly after kicking the ball in order to either keep it low or send it soaring. It's also to apply curl to the ball and send it arcing into the back of the net just as the professionals do it on a Saturday afternoon. Aftertouch helped make Kick Off 2 the game it is - and it works to reasonable effect in Manchester United Europe, too.

▲ 3-1 to Man U and Brian McClair steps up the applause!

First off, let me confess that I'm not a huge football fan - although Kick Off 2 had you truly glued to the screen until my eyes went out of focus and the joystick all but fell apart. People were bound to try and compare the two, but somehow I really don't think that's fair. Manchester United II is a fine game in its own right - the sheer amount of moves available to the player add a great deal to the game and the programmers have obviously put a lot of effort into capturing the atmosphere of the big match. For those of us appalled by the dribbling brilliance of Kick Off, all-edges-in balls which stick to boots can be a bit of a pain - but for all that there's plenty of challenge here. These days footy games have to be of the highest quality, and Man Utd II certainly acrew well here. I think many people will see this as a complement to Kick Off - anaload up and enjoy when you're looking for a different angle or want to live those dreams with the Saturday superstars. As such it's well worth a serious look and Krysalis can boast a job well done.

AMIGA
BY ACTIVISION

£25.99

Reports are coming in over the airwaves - a town in the deep South is no longer communicating with the outside world. All that was heard before the lines went dead were terrible screams - then a cry of "God help us!" A helicopter flys by reveals a terrifying reality - the inhabitants of the town have been transformed into blood-lusting zombies! Not only that, but the birds have become men-eaters and even the normally placid fish have turned into razor-fanged piranhas!

Not a very nice predicament to find yourself in, is it? But that's how it is, and it's up to you (and a friend if he so wishes) to quite literally stop the rot. There's only one course of action to embark upon - discover what has caused this horrific state of affairs and, if possible, find a way to revert these hideous creatures back to their previous forms. But you're no scientist, and anyway, the zombies have smashed up all the labs, so grab an Uzi and inject some lead into the poor, unfortunate citizens before they inject their teeth into you.

GRAB YOUR KIT AND KICK CORPSE!

Gone are the days when the only way to kill a zombie was by chopping off its head - in Beast Busters you can use the following items of destruction, which fall down the screen at various points during the game:

AMMO Extra rounds of ammunition for your machine gun

GRENADE Wipes out zombies - in a flash!

MORTAR Like the grenade, but does even more damage to those walking bags of bones

FIREBOMB As the name suggests, spreads flaming death around the playing area.

ELECTRICITY BALL Produces a high voltage charge which ties the dead guys on contact.

FIRST AID Adds much-needed energy to your health bar.

When SNK launched the Beast Busters coin-op, it went down a treat in arcades across the land, perhaps more for its bloodthirsty death sequences than the rather overdone Op Wooll-style of play. The game has now been stuffed into the Amiga, and to tell the truth there isn't much of a difference between this conversion and the original arcade machine. The stomach-churning graphics are all there - even the scenes where the zombies explode into chunks of bloodied flesh when they're disposed of. All the original collectables have been retained, from mortars to grenades, extra ammo to first aid kits, and even though the gameplay is the same old Op Wooll/Thunderbolt scroll 'n' shoot type, the screen scrolls at a leisurely pace and those baddies pour onto the screen to come face-to-face with a barrel full of bullets! So, if you like your Amiga blasting antralie 'n' all, you'd be hard pushed to find anything quite like Beast Busters - just be sure to have a bucket or paper bag by your side when you play!

UPDATE

Fred there are no 8-bit versions planned at the moment, but Beastbusters is due out on ST in August priced at £25.99. Watch out for it

THE FINAL BATTLE

One of the mysteries is solved here - someone's been indulging in a spot of cloning as you now come face to face with his guardians disposed of earlier in the game.

The Amiga has never really been well off for good Operation Wolf style games, and even Op Thunderbolt wasn't that good. Luckily, Beastbusters is a vast improvement on what's gone before, not just because it actually has the smooth 3D scrolling which wasn't in Op Wolf, but it's actually much more entertaining game. I mean, let's face it, would you rather shoot soldiers or splatter the innards of a thousand festering zombies all over the walls of a subway? There's quite some variety between the levels so the action doesn't grow too stale, and if you're playing with a friend you really do get double the fun. Beastbusters was definitely one of Activision's better licenses, and it's great to see that the company's past problems haven't meant that it has been lost forever. Definitely a must-buy!

Like "Lucky" Masters hasn't been living up to his nickname of Jete. It's 1928 and his charter airline business operating out of Hong Kong is on the rocks! He also owes a lot of money to Eugene Lomax, one of Hong Kong's most powerful businessmen, and not the kind of fellow you want to get on the wrong side of.

But things aren't going too well for Lomax either. His daughter, a nurse working in rural China, has recently been kidnapped. Reckoning that he owes him a favour, Lomax wants Lucky to rescue her, and to help persuade him Lomax has had Lucky's houseboel blown up! Not surprisingly, Lucky has accepted the job.

Lucky starts this adventure game on the docks at Hong Kong, looking at the remains of his home. From there, he has to catch a rickshaw into town to recruit a ninja, Zhao Chi, who will prove invaluable on the quest. After persuading Zhao Chi that eagles can really fly, you can take off to Chengdu. From there the quest leads to Kethmandu then to Istanbul and after a trip on The Orient Express, the culmination of the adventure takes place in Paris.

Check out that scenery!

CONTROL YOURSELF!

Adventure games which require you to use the keyboard era history. As in a lot of recent adventures, the commands in Heart of China are issued via a compass or pointer, which is either mouse or joystick controlled. Place the pointer over anything of interest and click the right button to examine it, or the left button to collect it (if it is indeed collectable). When the pointer is over speech, it turns into a speech bubble, and if you want to enter into conversation you're presented with a selection of things. Like Lucky likes to talk tough, but unless you're after a fight, try to be nice to people - you'll never know when you might need someone's help, and all the characters in the game have a good memory.

HARDWARE REQUIREMENTS

Running Heart of China requires a fast PC (486 or over) with a VGA card, 840k of memory, a hard drive and a high density floppy disk drive. So there.

There's no doubt that adventures have come a long way over the past year or so, what with easy-to-use command systems and incredible graphics, but I think maybe Heart of China is a step too far! The graphics and the sound create an excellent atmosphere, as does all the character interaction, and the controls are well-thought out. The designers have made an extreme effort to make the game feel like a film, and if done - the only problem is, it's not a particularly good film. The problem lies in the fact that the game really goes overboard with its conversation routines, and in the end there's just a bit too much talk and not quite enough action. That's not to say it ruins things, because the game still makes the game impressive. But if it came to a choice between this and Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade, I'd go for the man with the hat every time.

Take that! It's lucky he's got the open mouth or I'd have to blame him!

MAKING MOVIES

One of the first things to strike the player about Heart Of China is its unusual graphical style. Many of the backgrounds are hand-drawn, but the people in the game are actually digitised pictures of actors. More than 65 people were cast as the characters, and still of them were killed out with the correct 100 costumes, and they were even made up for the camera. The photographs were then turned into computer images using three colour scanners and appear on the PC screen in either 16 or 256 colours via a VGA card.

At first glance, Heart Of China looks incredible. Look closer and you'll find amazing graphics and an interactive computer movie polished until it shines. Search deeper still and there's not much left to find, because however groundbreaking Heart Of China is, it's not a particularly good game. Basically the interaction boils down to three choices in most situations, with progress or lack of it depending on your response. The upshot is that the player has to sit through lengthy conversations, most of which is entirely superfluous (although quite amusing), twiddling thumbs and gazing at the graphics whilst waiting for the next dacilon. Don't get me wrong, Heart Of China is a stunning, bold product with graphics occasionally unsurpassed. Trouble is it's just not enough, and for your money you want something a bit more than a graphical tour-de-force which doesn't have enough at its heart to merit repeated play and turn it into a classic.

BATTLETECH

CENTER

BATTLEMECH

3029.A.D.

Set in the battlefields of the 31st century, Battletech puts you in control of a BattleMech, a 12-metre high, heavily armoured robot of war fitted with the most awesome weapons of destruction ever devised. It's a supremely powerful machine and can only be stopped by one thing - another Mech! And this is what this incredible new arcade experience is all about.

The Battletech Centre in Chicago is the first in what's hoped will be a series of worldwide centres where players can visit and play Battletech. A very impressive place, it looks like an arcade of the future - with rows and rows of Battletech pods into which the players climb to pilot their giant robots.

Games are usually played with six or so players at a time, either with two teams of three Mechs, or in a free-for-all scenario like those in which I played. Here's the experience.

COUNTDOWN TO COMBAT

Before combat begins, you're briefed on the controls and the way the Mech works. As you can see from the diagram, an explanation is certainly needed - the controls take a bit of getting used to.

Once you've been through the training drill, it's time to assign yourself a codename (JAZ for me, of course), choose a Mech from the variety of models available and climb into the cockpit to engage in Mech war!

The cockpits are very comfortable, and once you've slid the door shut (completely cutting you off from the outside world) you really feel like you're sitting in the heart of a Mech, cocooned by a massive bank of lights and dials. You've even got a pull-down microphone so you can talk to other players!

KEEPING CONTROL

The controls are pretty intimidating at first, but not all of them are needed to play at the basic level. As you get better, you can switch on all sorts of extra stuff like infra-red scanning, independenturret rotation and realign the weapons to work in a specific order.

The control panel is dominated by a large TV monitor, where all the action takes place. Players are given a first person perspective few feet out of the "eyes" of their Mech, so your machine stands in front of another you see that Mech and the player who's piloting the Mech opposite will see you! The 3D graphics are truly outstanding and utterly convincing. The Mechs are beautifully animated, and the backgrounds and sky realistically fade towards the horizon. Weather conditions are changeable and you can play at night, in a desert, on fields. In fog, rain, snow - the combinations are enormous.

CAN YOU TAKE THE HEAT?

Myself and five others played a series of ten minute games set in the desert, with a heat haze giving only 1000 meters visibility. Consequently Mechs could sneak up quite close to you before you made visual contact. That meant that you had to constantly keep one eye on the radar below the main screen to make sure no-one was approaching with missiles and lasers ready to blow you apart.

After chatting with the Battletech operator about the different Mech series available, I decided to choose a Loki V3. It's as slow as a coach, but it's got the best armour and carries the most powerful weapons. Others in my group chose MacCals (more speed, but weaker armament), and Hilman (a 'professional' player of more than 600 games experience who was brought in to show us how to play) selected a Vulture Prime which he said was the weakest Mech. 'Just to give us a chance' The Mech movement and weapon targeting systems operate independently, and concentrating on tracking down other Mechs - aiming your weapons and hitting them is quite tricky at first - especially when they're trying to do the same to you.

TRICKY TACTICS!

My tactic was to turn around and run away from the other five, then wait for one to break away from the pack so I could stalk him without being blasted in the melee. It takes six or seven well-aimed hits to destroy a Mech, but the satisfaction you get when you see the pilot blast off in an automatic escape capsule seconds before the Mech explodes is enormous! In one particular one-on-one encounter I managed to blow an arm and leg off a Mech and watched gleefully as it hopped along (they do that!) I finally put it out of its misery by blowing its pelvis apart! In the games I played, pilots whose Mechs were blown up were returned in the same Mech a few miles from the centre of battle. In other scenarios, pilots return in fast mini-mechs which although have weak armour and armament, they can prove to be a real thorn in the side of the big Mechs. At professional level, if you die, it's all over.

JOIN THE LEAGUE

The Battletech Centre has several leagues in operation, each filled with teams of three players. Contests are held weekly, and the teams battle fiercely for top honours. There are seminars on tactics, and teams constantly practice manoeuvres together to perfect attack patterns and discover new ways of getting the most out of the machinery!

DE-BRIEFING

After each battle, each Mech Warrior is given a printout of his performance. The sheet lists the all the players' scores, and also gives blow-by-blow highlights of the contest. As you can see from Jezza's de-briefing from his third match, there's a war going on out there.

THE VERDICT

Battletech is definitely the most exciting interactive videogame system yet devised. The realistic graphics combined with the utterly convincing cockpit interior results in an awesome experience that keeps you buzzing hours after you've left the Centre. In Chicago people are hooked on it, and it's easy to see why - it's simply amazing. If a Battletech Centre does appear in London you'll definitely see me there as often as possible. And you'd better watch out, because I'll be out to destroy you!

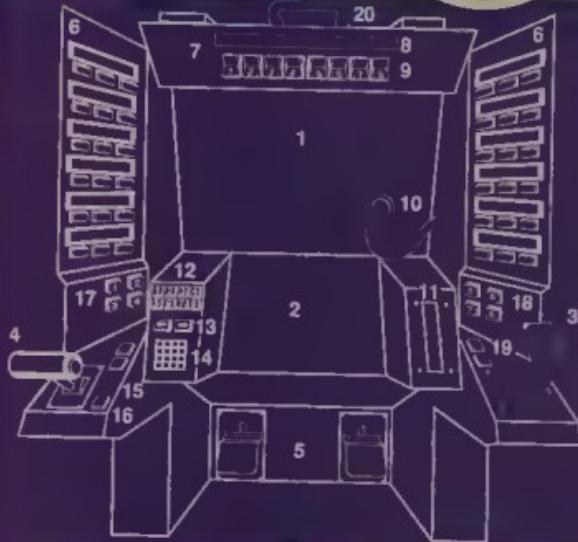

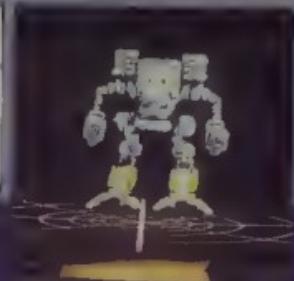

BOTS

Microprose's next arcade machine, following on from their impressive F-15 Strike Eagle coin-op will be BOTS, a game based around huge fighting robots. Their latest vector 3D graphics driver is pushed to its limits as you pilot a giant war robot around a vast arena, taking on other 'bots in an almost gladiatorial-style conflict. An early version of the machine I saw at the CES show in Chicago looked very impressive indeed, and I think that it could be a runaway success! We'll bring you more information closer to the machine's UK launch date.

COMING TO LONDON

Battletech franchises are up for grabs at the moment, and Battletech head honcho John Weissman hopes to have a London Battletech Centre up and running within a year. We'll tell you more about it when we have more information.

HEAVY MECH

There are four basic types of Mech available at present:

LOKI

Very heavily armed and armoured, but they're slow. They're great in close combat, and their backs are well armed to help it escape various damage if it's jumped from behind.

Loki Prim.
(Primary Version)
Top Speed: 97 Kph
Number of Weapons:
2 A.F.C. 50mm
1 S.R.M. 6 pack
2 Medium Lasers
2 Small Lasers
2 Machine Guns

VULTURE

A fast Mech that's packed with long-range weaponry. They're not particularly well armed, but they have a batch of short-range lasers just in case it finds itself in close-quarter combat.

Vulture Prim.
(Primary Version)
Top Speed: 97 Kph
Number of Weapons:
2 LRM 20-packs
2 Large Lasers
2 Medium Lasers
2 Small Lasers

MADCAT

A well balanced, but ageing Mech that features good armament, armour and speed capabilities. It doesn't excel in any areas, but if you're after a solid, versatile all-round Mech, you can't go wrong with this.

MadCat Prim.
(Primary Version)
Top Speed: 97 Kph
Number of Weapons:
2 L.R.M. 15 packs
1 P.P.C.
2 Large Lasers
2 Medium Lasers

THOR

Available in a wide variety of variants, the Thor is almost as well armoured as a Loki and can carry a wide variety of weapons, which can slow it down or speed it up depending on how heavy its armoury is. Because its weapons are so varied, you must approach it with caution - you never know quite what it might be carrying!

Thor Prim.
(Primary Version)
Top Speed: 97 Kph
Number of Weapons:
1 L.R.M. 10 pack
2 A.F.C. 25mm
2 Large Lasers
4 Small Lasers

ARCADE ACTION

A recent giant Capcom have lined up a real treat for gamblers with their amazing new triple-in-one cabinet - the Three Wonders!

The impressive machine, featured at the recent Electrocoin arcade show, includes three great games on one CP system board - which means you get to choose which one you play! Midnight Wanderers, Charlot and Don't Pull are the threesome on offer, and pretty darned good they all are.

The first two games are interlinked in as much as Midnight Wanderers is the quest for the Charlot you use in the second game, although each of the three can be played independently of the others. Here's the lowdown on each game.

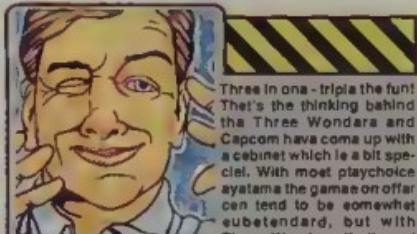

INSERT COIN

BY CAPCOM

WONDERS

Three in one - triple the fun! That's the thinking behind the Three Wonders and Capcom have come up with a cabinet which is a bit special. With most playchoice systems the games on offer can tend to be somewhat substandard, but with Three Wonders that's not the case at all. Each game could quite happily stand in its own cabinet, and put together there's something here to appeal to just about every gameplayer around. Charlot has to be my favourite - featuring big, colourful and bold sprites and some heavy-duty shoot 'em up action. Midnight Wanderers didn't appeal at first, but it's weird atmosphere soon tempts you back. Don't Pull is a puzzle game to rank alongside some of the best of the genre, taxing your brain while the trigger finger takes a break. Check out Three Wonders as soon as you get the chance - you'll wonder how they managed to squeeze so much into one big box! This is going to be huge...

TIM
BOONE

PUSH 'N' PULL PUZZLING!

Don't Pull is a puzzling fantasy game set in the wonderful world of Don and Pull - two cute characters whose mission in life is to push and pull blocks around and knock six bells out of the bad guys. Mini biceps bulging, our heroes race around the screen avoiding their enemies and trying to squash the baddies into so much mermalade by shoving hefty blocks at them. The troublesome twosome can also try to collect fruit for extra credits while three hearts in a row gives a special bonus. Easy to pick up and hugely addictive, this one will puzzle up your loose change in a jiffy!

MIDNIGHT MAYHEM

Midnight Wanderers is billed as the action game of the lot, featuring some magical graphics and great gameplay to match. Our heroes Lou and Siva set off on a quest into the Damon's Castle to liberate the amazing Chariot of Light from the evil bad-gaia.

The central sprites are extremely cute and well animated, which allows you to employ a wide variety of tactics and moves as our gun-toting good guys take on a whole host of evil villains. Along the way Lou and Siva will pick up some fairly magical allies, including the Firestorm which fires up your enemies, the Chilly which chills them and the Corkscrew which, um, does various nasty things...

All in all, Midnight Wanderers is a great looking platform shooting romp with some well-waived graphics to add that extra touch. You'll soon be hooked on the game and keep coming back for more.

GREMLIN

Utopia, in case you didn't know, is a term used to describe the perfect society with no strife or unhappy people. Of course, everyone wants to live in a Utopia, but life being what it is and people being what they are, it's practically impossible to create one. Or is it?

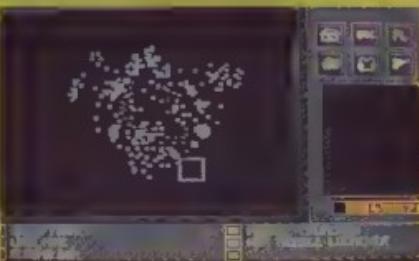

Like SimCity and Populous, this game from Gremlin lets you run your own colony, only this time the colony is on a distant planet which is also populated by ten other alien species. The aim of the game is to keep the colony running for as long as possible, and get the colonists' Quality of Life to above 90%.

Once you've constructed living quarters for your brave space pioneers, you'll need food stores, a power station and some solar energy panels, and some space moss converter plants which provide the colony's air supply. To provide an extra boost to the Quality of Life-ometer you can construct a hospital or a sports complex.

As well as levying taxes on the colonists, you can finance your operation with ore mining, but beware of envious aliens. They will happily mount attacks on your installations if they aren't adequately defended, so you need to invest some of that oil revenue in weapons research and tank construction.

We've seen a demo of Utopia and programmer Graham Ing (one of the men behind Gremlin's BSS Jane Seymour) has done an extremely good job - in fact there were mutterings in the CVG games room which went "blah, blah... Mmm very nice indeed... blah, blah... Mmm, next SimCity... blah, blah". In fact, word has it that a lot of console programmers were showing a great deal of interest in the game at the Chicago CES Show, so it may eventually appear on Megadrive and Super NES. We'll keep you posted.

UTOPIA

BATTLE STATIONS!

Any colony with sufficient technical skills can construct weapons and mobile defence units to keep invaders at bay. Small laser turrets can be sited around the outskirts of the colony, and really cautious commandants can create a perimeter of minarets to defend against any enemy ground attacks. If you'd prefer to attack your neighbours first, you can send out units of tanks to attack any enemy forces in a particular area. The same can be achieved with spacecraft of which there are five increasingly powerful types. Not surprisingly, the best weapons require the most skilled technicians to build them, and the best raw materials.

AUTO-TRADER

Trading is an essential part of the game, because you have to sell your ore and buy other raw materials to construct various facilities. However, if you want to concentrate on another aspect of the game you can let the computer sell a certain percentage of your goods at the end of every month.

MEGA TWINS

Long, long ago, long before anyone can remember and a very long time before they forgot it, along came a terrible monster to spoil doom for the paradise land of Alurea.

Wrecking everything in its path this frightful beast ravaged the land and wiped out the peaceful people of this lovely land. They had forgotten how to fight, and the price they paid was high indeed.

Luckily for everyone except that foul fiend, the King's twin baby sons survived the massacre. Now they're looking for revenge in US Gold's conversion of the Capcom com-op - and these twins are babies when it comes to herd-hitting screen action!

IT'S THE TERRIBLE TWINS:

Fifteen years after the monster ran riot over their beloved homeland, the twins have set out on a quest to avenge the outrage and put the world to rights again. Armed with a sword and shield, cute costumes and a wide variety of blooming useful hats, the Mega Twins are ready to take on anything the bad guys can throw at them.

Battling through level after level the clapper title duo are in search of the legendary stone known only as Dragon Blue Eyes. The stone holds off the secret end is the only way the twins can reawaken their country and bring peace and prosperity to the land.

MEGA MANIC MONEY MAKER?

Capcom's little-known Mega Twins com-op didn't exactly cause a storm in the arcades, and must be one of the most under-rated games to have gone the rounds. Arcade masters say the game looks great, plays well and is addictive.

All in all it looks as if US Gold have picked up a nice license, especially considering the success of their previous Capcom conversion, Mars.

Mega Twins might just turn out to be the same success the then little-known Zalgo conversion New Zealand Story was for Ocean. With versions planned later this year for the Amiga, ST, C64, Spectrum and Amstrad, we'll wait with fingers crossed!

We've seen you all over the Super Famicom version of Capcom's gut-busting revenge known as the new, and we understand why: it's one of the most kick-ass Famicom titles available. But woe betide the Amiga owner - computer versions are almost ready to roll, courtesy of those gangsta programmers! If you've seen the arcade version, you'll be amazed how much a copy of the original graphics thins Amiga screenshots are - and they aren't even completed yet! But is the finished version going to contain the fast action, headbutts and mayhem which made the arcade game such a winner? Only time will tell, but you can be sure that no matter how muscley the Amiga version is, it's gonna be a gloriously violent game we're looking forward to.

US Gold's Final Fight for the Amiga, ST, C64, Spectrum and Amstrad

TWO-PLAYERS? NO PROBLEM!

One of the best features of the original coin-op left out of Super Famicom Final Fight was the two-player mode (oh yeah, we were sent a load of "cheats" telling us how to access a two-player mode - a cheat which was, quite frankly, rubbish and true). Not so in the computer incarnations - here you get full, two player participation. Not only that, US Gold are alsoing all three fighters - Guy, Cody and Heegar - whereas the console game could only manage the first two chaps. Pah, who says console can out-gun the good old computer?!

PROFILE OF HAGGER

HAGGER b. 9.3.1943

He is a former champion street Fighter. He's the Mayor of Metro City, has mastered professional wrestling skills and is expert at the BACK DROP and the PILE DRIVER.

Metro City, a well known Crime Capital, has been taken over by violence and death for YOUR CHAMPION!

GUY: Has mastered the art of Ninjitsu. Attacks his enemies with unequalled speed. Often catches his opponents off-guard with his specialty "Off The Wall" jump.

CODY: A martial arts expert. He is especially good with knives.

HAGGER: A former champion Street Fighter. He's the new mayor of Metro City, has mastered professional wrestling skills and is an expert at the BACK DROP and the PILE DRIVER.

PROFILE OF CODY

CODY b. 4.18.1967

He is a martial arts expert. He is especially good with knives. His girlfriend, Jessica, was kidnapped by the Mad Gear gang.

PROFILE OF GUY

GUY b. 8.12.1966

He has mastered the art of Ninjitsu and is quick with unequalled speed. He often catches his opponents off guard with his special "Off the Wall" jump.

SO WHAT'S THE STORY?

Well, there's this bloke see, and his name is Hagger. He used to be numero uno in the street-fighting world but now he's moved into politics as mayor of rough, tough Metro City. Anyway, old Hagger is a law-abiding chap and he's put a stop to organised crime, which the previous mayor turned a blind eye to. Which is why the Mad Gear gang are upset. So upset, in fact, that they've kidnapped Hagger's daughter, Jessica, stripped her half naked (obviously so she won't run away!) and have threatened all sorts of unspeakable things should Hagger refuse to allow them to run their "business".

Obviously he's not overjoyed at this state of affairs, so off he goes in search of her. Along with best mates Cody (Jessica's lover) and Guy (who would be Jessica's lover). A fairly straightforward excuse for a good old looking sprore!

US GOLD

Remember this? OutRun Europa is US Gold's own installment in the OutRun saga which was originally planned for release back in 1989. But then Turbo OutRun came along and it made more sense to release a conversion of that while the arcade game was still hot, so this project was temporarily shelved. Now it's back, and due for release on all formats, including Sega Master System, this September.

You play a British secret agent who has been given some top secret plans to deliver to an unknown destination in Europe. But disaster has, not surprisingly, struck. The plans have been stolen by foreign spies, and your bosses in London think you've pinched them! With Europe's entire security force at your back, you have to catch up with the plane while avoiding capture, and the chase is set over seven stages.

Out Run EUROPA

This time, you don't just get a Ferrari to speed around in. You start the game on a stolen motorbike which you have to drive from London to Dover, where the chase continues across the Channel on a jet-kiel! All the time, enemy agents and foreign police forces are trying to run you off the road so getting to the end stage is all down to your skill at driving and dodging.

Probe software are programming all versions of the game. As well as producing the 8-bit conversions of Special Criminal Investigations, Probe were also responsible for the successful home versions of Turbo OutRun, so their mastery of the driving simulation is already proven. And from what we've seen of OutRun Europa, their reputation is in no danger of being tarnished.
